Liberals vow new security for Taiwan

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN
N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — Sens. Edward M. Kennedy and Alan Cranston, both supporters of President Carter's normalization of relations with China, will open a drive today to assure that Taiwan will retain some of the security assurances in the mutual-defense treaty after it is terminated at the end of this year.

In a surprise move, the two liberal Democrats have decided to seek a joint resolution of Congress, which carries the weight of law, in an effort to indicate that concern for Taiwan extended beyond conservatives, led by Sens. Barry Goldwater, Harry F. Byrd and Robert Dole, who have attacked the plan to terminate the treaty.

Sen. Frank Church, the new chairman of the influential Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" Sunday that Congress should pass a resolution stating that the United States expects Peking to settle its differences with Taipei peacefully.

"Congress should make it clear that recognition of China in no way denigrates our concern for Taiwan," Church said.

(More details, p. A-5)

When Carter announced on Dec. 15 that he would normalize diplomatic relations with Peking on Jan. 1 and terminate the 1955 defense treaty, he said the United States had an interest in the peaceful resolution of the Taiwan question.

Carter and other officials have said they expected China to be peacefully reunited with Taiwan, though they acknowledged that Peking had refused to make such a pledge.

The administration has also said it will deliver military equipment already ordered by Taiwan and will sell it additional defensive equipment starting in 1980.

Kennedy of Massachusetts and Cranston of California have sent a letter to other members of Congress expressing the need for "a congressional expression of continuing concern for the security of Taiwan."

The preamble to the resolution says the American people want to continue their extensive, close and friendly relations with the people on Taiwan and have a correspondingly deep concern for the peace, prosperity and welfare of the people on Taiwan."

It repeats the president's expectation that the Taiwan issue will be settled peacefully and his pledge to sell defensive arms to Taiwan.

Then, asserting that an armed attack against Taiwan "would represent a danger to the stability and peace of the area," the resolution directs the president "to inform the Congress promptly of any danger to the interests, concerns, and expectations of the United States in the peace, prosperity and welfare of Taiwan."

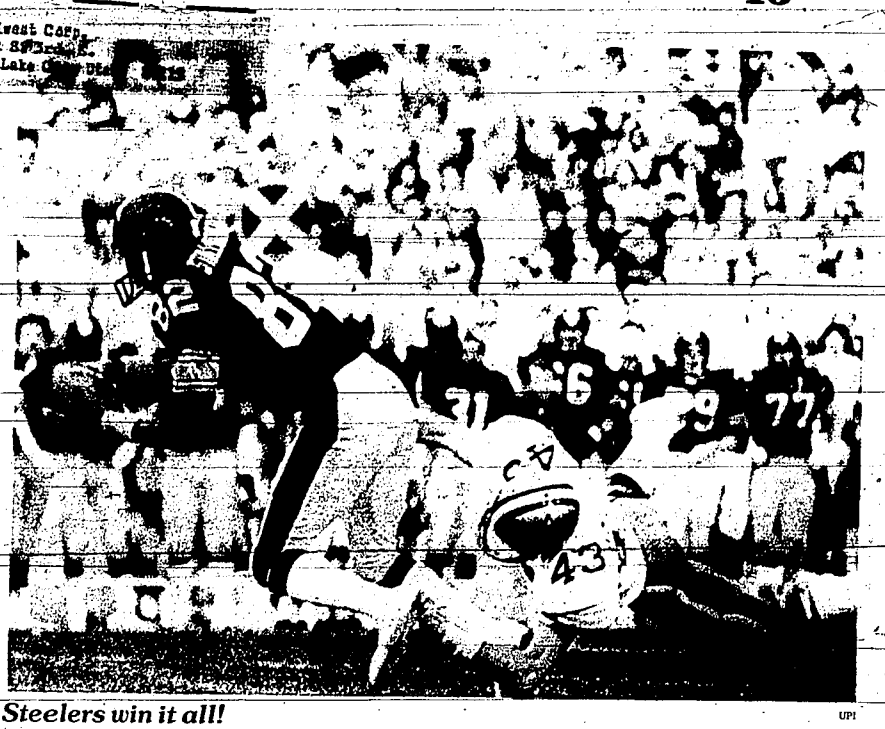

The last section says that "Congress finds and declares that it is the policy of the United States to act in accordance with constitutional processes and procedures established by law to meet any danger" and to otherwise "safeguard the interests, concerns and expectations of the United States."

President to unveil his budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter today will unveil a 1980 budget that would trim Social Security benefits, cut back youth employment programs, and hold welfare recipients to a higher standard of eligibility.

Carter's military spending request, however, is expected to be up by as much as $10 billion over last year.

Carter's austere budget, reflecting cuts in many social services paid for by middle income families, already have touched off howls of rage from liberals and minorities who complain their programs are suffering while the Pentagon budget grows.

Social programs, however, will not be the only ones to feel the pinch.

Reduced spending for farm price supports, conservation and timber sales would pull down Agriculture Department spending.

Officials said average yields and average weather would bring farm support costs to $2.6 billion, down $2.2 billion from the current fiscal 1979 estimate.

The proposed $18.4 billion agriculture budget would be $1.8 billion less than current spending.

Another major cut is expected in Energy Department spending.

Wreck mistaken as just a drill

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Memorial Hospital called a number of doctors and hospital employees out for disaster duty Sunday but many of them thought it was just a test of disaster preparedness.

But the mock disaster wasn't a drill. A head-on collision of two pickup trucks Sunday on the Rock Creek Canyon road north of Magic Mountain Ski Resort sent eight persons to the hospital and activated a disaster response team at MVMH.

About 10 extra hospital employees were called in to assist in treatment of the injured.

Many of the doctors and hospital personnel apparently didn't realize the disaster was real, not imagined.

Several men who normally respond willingly for either a mock disaster or the real thing reportedly were resentful of being called away from the Super Bowl.

"Why couldn't people who plan these things pick any other day but Super Bowl day—and right in the middle of the game too?" asked one medical staff member at the hospital Sunday.

It took only a few seconds before everyone was aware it was no practice drill, Hospital administrator James Rosenbaum said the disaster team functioned smoothly. None of the victims was critically injured, however.

Rosenbaum said he had no difficulty getting ahold of disaster team members. They were all at home—watching the game.

Any accident or other emergency with 8 to 12 injured persons constitutes a minor disaster, a major disaster being when the injured are seriously hurt.

A minor disaster designation requires 8 to 10 additional hospital workers and medical staff members be on duty to handle the extra load at the emergency room.

Ambulances carrying the injured arrived at MVMH just before shift change Sunday, Rosenbaum said, and it was easy to hold over some workers to supplement those arriving for duty.

Magic Valley Ambulance Service personnel sent the first ambulance to the accident scene at 1 p.m. and called for a second when it was found all eight persons in the two vehicles had suffered injuries.

Special judges to rule on evesdropping

By ROBERT PEAR
Washington Star

WASHINGTON — Within the next 30 days, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger will designate seven federal judges to sit in Washington on a special court like no other court in the world.

The tribunal will conduct all its business in secret and will have but one main purpose: to approve or disapprove warrants for electronic surveillance of spies, counterspies, embassies, international terrorists, saboteurs and, in exceptional cases, American citizens with information deemed essential to national security.

The judges, drawn from different regions of the country, will be entrusted with some of the most sensitive secrets of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Central Intelligence Agency and the National Security Agency.

Court orders will identify the targets of surveillance, describe the technique and state "whether physical entry will be used to effect the surveillance."

The new court was one of several checks on the intelligence community required by the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978.

In signing the measure last October, President Carter said that it "requires for the first time, a prior judicial warrant for all electronic surveillance for foreign intelligence or counterintelligence purposes in the United States in which communications of U.S. xersons might be intercepted."

Previously, presidents claimed an "inherent" constitutional right to conduct warrantless wiretaps for foreign intelligence purposes, even though they acknowledged the need for a warrant when tapping telephones to gather evidence of a crime.

Under the new law, the attorney general would have to approve any application for a warrant before it is submitted to a judge.

The new law sets carefully graduated standards that give maximum protection to citizens and resident aliens; somewhat less protection to foreign visitors, diplomatic personnel and illegal aliens; and still less protection to embassy premises.

Under the new law, the attorney general, without a court order, can authorize electronic surveillance of communication channels used exclusively by embassies and foreign powers. This type of warrantless surveillance is legal only when there's "no substantial likelihood" of intercepting communications of an American citizen.

Gem State Airlines begin Idaho flights

TWIN FALLS — Gem State Airlines, the newest of a string of commuter airlines hoping to economically link Idaho's major cities, begins service to Twin Falls today.

Six Gem State flights per day will touch down at Twin Falls City-County airport, three of the flights heading east to Pocatello and Idaho Falls and three others heading west to Boise.

Connecting flights in Boise will link Twin Falls passengers to Moscow-Pullman and Coeur d' Alene.

The new airline will fly prop-jet Swearinger Metro planes with a seating capacity of 18 plus crew.

Flight 303, today's first flight, departs from Twin Falls at 7:15 a.m., destined for Boise, Lewiston, Pullman and Coeur d'Alene.

Flight 303 departs at 9:45 a.m. from Boise and goes to Pocatello and Idaho Falls. Both of these flights will service Magic Valley Monday through Friday.

Flight 314 departs at 12:35 p.m. seven days a week, going to Boise and the three other cities on the northern loop.

Flight 363 leaves at 3:30 p.m. for Pocatello and Idaho Falls. It is also a seven day a week flight.

The two other flights fly Monday through Friday only and include flight 384, leaving at 6:20 p.m. for Boise and the three other cities to the north: Flight 375 leaves at 7 p.m. going to Pocatello and Idaho Falls.

Information on flight costs has not been announced pending arrival of the sleek 18 passenger planewith Gem State officials today.

An example of fares, however, is the Twin Falls to Boise one-way fare of $35.

Four Twin Falls businessmen took an inaugural flight on the new airline on Friday as part of a statewide tour by Gem State executives.

Wild winter weather floods eastern United States

By United Press International

An unlikely winter arsenal of heavy rains deluged the middle Atlantic Coast, flooding many roads and bridges and knocking out commuter rail service in the New York City area.

Residents of southern Maine, still digging out from a record 27 inches of snow, were hit with another 6 inches that turned to freezing rain in the early morning.

Freezing rain extended from lower Michigan to New England. Ice storm warnings were issued in the face of dropping temperatures for parts of Pennsylvania, western New York and southern New England.

More than 3 inches of moisture — a sloppy combination of snow, sleet and finally rain — bombarded the New York City area where temperatures soared to 53 degrees. The slushfall heaped havoc upon travelers and was blamed for at least five deaths.

Three men died Sunday in a two car collision on an icy Connecticut road and one Connecticut woman who was stranded in her flooded car drowned as a powerful combination of snow, sleet and rain whipped New England causing heavy flooding.

Ida Remeleir, 52, drowned in Stratford, Conn., when she was trapped in her submerged car.

The engine of a New Haven, Conn., to New York Conrail train derailed as it negotiated its way across flooded tracks five miles outside New Haven. No injuries were reported.

Earlier, train service in and out of Grand Central terminal was halted for more than an hour by a power blackout caused by the flooding of a feeder cable in the Bronx.

'Pop Rocks' probed

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — The Maine Department of Agriculture said Sunday it is investigating the new candy fad called "Pop Rocks" to determine whether it is harmful to children.

The candy, manufactured by General Foods, is a combination of flavoring, sugar and carbon dioxide that "explodes" in the mouth when it comes in contact with saliva, causing tingling and popping sensations.

When Sarah Haberecker, 6, of Windham, Maine, ate the package of ... last Saturday night her mother said she became violently ill, prompting her parents to seek help from the state's poison control center.

The Rev. Elizabeth Habecker, an Episcopalian minister, said her daughter vomited for four hours before the pain subsided.

"We are sending an investigator down on Monday to see what we can come up with," Robert E. Clark, an Agriculture Department food inspection supervisor, said Sunday.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Is Jay Solomon, head of the scandal-ridden General Services Administration, on the way out?

The Washington Post said Sunday the Carter administration is getting ready to replace Solomon as GSA administrator, probably in the spring.

But the Washington Star said Solomon intends to hold on to his job. "Solomon has not been asked to resign and he has no plans to resign," an aide to the GSA chief was quoted as saying.

The Post said senior administration officials, including presidential assistant Hamilton Jordan and Attorney General Griffin Bell, are preparing to replace Solomon.

Watson leaves Statesman

BOISE (UPI) — Gary Watson, editor of the Idaho Statesman has resigned to take over a similar post in Missouri.

Watson, editor of the Statesman since 1978 and managing editor of the newspaper prior to that time, has been named editor of two Springfield, Mo., newspapers owned by Gannett Inc.

Watson, 33, who has been with the paper since 1975, will edit two papers with a combined daily circulation of about 82,000.

Taking over Watson's duties will be Rod Sandeen, 35, who becomes the newspaper's chief news executive and retains his managing editor title. Sandeen joined the Statesman in 1973 after stints on newspapers in Connecticut and Colorado.

U.N. telegram faked

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — A telegram supposedly sent by Cambodia's new president to the United Nations was a clumsy forgery prepared at Vietnam's U.N. mission in New York, diplomatic sources said Sunday.

Growing knowledge of the fake telegram could hold back acceptance of the Vietnam-installed regime in Phnom Penh by nations outside the Soviet-Vietnam bloc, the sources said.

Today's weather

Chance of more snow this week

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert and Northside Areas:

Increasing clouds with periods of snow likely this morning and a chance of scattered snow showers in the afternoon. Partly cloudy and colder tonight and Tuesday with chance of few light snow showers. Windy at times today. Lows zero to 10 above and highs today 25 to 30. High Tuesday in the mid 20s.

Camas Prairie, Hailey and Upper Wood River Valley:

Scattered snow showers likely today and partly cloudy and colder tonight and Tuesday. A chance of a few snow showers today and Tuesday. Windy at times. Lows tonight 5 to 15 below zero. Highs today 15 to 25 and Tuesday in the teens.

Synopsis:

A weather front rolling through the state Sunday afternoon left various amounts of snow in its wake, the greatest amounts in the northern panhandle area. Other stations reported lesser amounts as snow began spreading into southern portions of the state Sunday evening.

Windy conditions were also reported in the upper Snake River Valley and in northern Idaho cooler temperatures and fog were reported. The fog is expected to continue in valley areas during the morning hours.

High tempertures were mostly in the low to mid 30s with Lewiston reporting 40 degrees for th warmest reading at 3 p.m. Salmon had a low of 3 below zero for the coldest report Sunday morning.

Precipitation has been moderate to occassional heavy in the northern area with 5 inches of snow reported at Coeur d'Alene Sunday afternoon.

The weather front will bring increasing chances of precipitation to all of Idaho with snow showers expected today.

Smog rules to soften

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Administration this week is expected to raise the allowable level of smog in cities by 50 percent, the Washington Post reported Sunday.

The Post said that EPA Administrator Douglas Costle is expected to announce that the acceptable levels of smog will be raised from .08 to .12 micrograms per cubic meter of air — a compromise between industry which wants a .16 level or higher and environmentalists who want the level reduced.

EPA's chief spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Costle would not confirm or deny the figures but he added, "the decision will be made in the next week."

"As we interpret it, Costle is not allowed to make this decision on economic balancing between the costs and health effects," Fitzwater said.

During a six month public comment period, he said, EPA had received data on the health effects of smog levels that suggested the standard should be set between .10 and .25.

If the smog standard is lowered — which appears very likely — "it will take effect immediately," Fitzwater said. This will mean savings to business of billions of dollars in clean-up equipment.

Fitzwater said White House inflation fighters Alfred Kahn and Charles Schultze had met personally with Costle earlier this year to discuss pollutant standards. He said that he wouldn't "characterize it as pressure," which environmentalists have claimed.

The Post said environmentalists are prepared to go to court.

The newspaper quoted Robert Rauch, an Environmental Defense Fund attorney, as saying "Costle is opening a Pandora's Box" by relaxing the standards, adding that the .12 standard "would have virtually no margin of safety" for people suffering from respiratory diseases.

The proposed lowering of acceptable smog levels is part of an EPA review of all pollutant standards mandated by Congress. It must be completed by 1980. The urban smog standard is the first to be reviewed, Fitzwater said.

19th arson victim found

HOBOKEN, N.J. (UPI) — Firefighters Sunday found the 19th victim of a tenement house blaze that wiped out three families while investigators searched the neighborhood for an arsonist suspected of setting the holocaust.

Investigators questioned the occupants of two adjoining buildings and scores of relatives of the victims, checking a report that someone may have set the fire out of a grudge against a family that lived in the building.

Later, Mayor Steve Cappiello said the report of a family feud apparently was untrue. "We had a report that there had been a feud between two families," he said. "It was just a rumor. We heard it and checked it out, but there was nothing to it."

Gem State takes to the air

Ken Beebee of Four Ways Travel Service in Twin Falls, Chamber of Commerce President Joe Cilek, Warren Barry of the Industrial Development Corporation of the Chamber of Commerce, and Doug Moore of KMVT-TV Channel 11, joined business leaders from Pocatello and Idaho Falls on the plane about 11 a.m., flew to Boise for a champagne buffet at the Boise airport and were back in Twin Falls by 2:45 p.m.

Gem State Airlines hopes more than four passengers will board its planes each time they stop in Twin Falls.

Gem State vice president for sales and marketing Phil Guidice said Friday advance computer reservation lists indicate next week's flights are filling up at a fair pace. He said although the airlines has not yet launched its major advertising campaign, one southern Idaho flight next week is already fully booked.

Guidice, co-founder of Washington State's Cascade Airways, which began operation in 1969 and last year carried 200,000 passengers, said he is confident there are enough people in the cities Gem State plans to serve to justify the huge investment made to get the airline off the ground.

He said "Anytime you've got a population of 25,000 or more you can support commuter service,".

He said the airline's investment will top the $8 million mark when it purchases the two additional $1.2 million, 19-passenger, Swearingen Metro twin-engine prop jets it has ordered.

Although Gem State's expansion to southern Idaho has not yet proven successful, Guidice was talking Friday about which direction the airlines might expand next.

He said phone requests received by the airline indicate the next logical destinations for Gem State planes would be Salt Lake City and Reno, in that order.

Callers have asked for service to those locations more often than any other destination, he said.

He said if Gem State does decide to fly to those cities, flights would not necessarily go there direct from Twin Falls but might leave from other stations in the Gem State System.

Disaster was real

Ambulance personnel also radioed a messaged to the hospital about 2 p.m. advising officials there would be eight injured people arriving shortly.

Five of the eight injured people had to be retained in the hallways of Magic Valley Memorial because of limited emergency room space.

Cassia County Deputy Sheriff Reuben Saldana, investigating officer, said the accident occurred about 11:45 a.m. 15 miles south of Hansen.

Saldana said it took some time to notify officials and summon ambulances due to the mountainous terrain where the accident occurred.

He said Don Montgomery, 22, of Eden, was driving down hill too fast for the icy road conditions. He applied his brakes on a curve and his front wheels locked.

Montgomery's 1976 pickup skidded into the path of the southbound vehicle driven by Boyd Harms, 20, of Wendell.

Saldana said both vehicles were demolished and two of the three snowmobiles being pulled by Harms's 1978 pickup were damaged.

Saldana estimated damage roughly at $8,000 to the Montgomery vehicle and $14,000 to the Harms vehicle and snowmachines.

Ambulance personnel who arrived from the accident scene said the two pickup trucks crashed head on and both remained in the uphill lane of the road. Two wreckers were required to pull the vehicles apart. When ambulances arrived, occupants of both vehicles were out of the damaged cabs of their pickup trucks, they said.

The Wendell party was enroute to the Diamondfield Jack Snowmobile area just above the Magic Mountain ski resort.

The northbound vehicle was occupied by a group of Eden and Hazelton residents who had been tubing in the recreational area.

Saldana said the road is partly in Twin Falls and partly in Cassia Counties but the accident scene is just over the Cassia County line.

Three persons remain hospitalized this morning and another is still under observation.

The injured included the drivers, Harms, 20, admitted and operated on for a knee fracture; Montgomery, 22, Eden, treated and released but still under observation; Robert Sellers, 16, of Hazelton, admitted and in fair condition and believed to have an injured back; Robert Winkle, 17, of Hazelton, admitted in good condition;

Treated and released were Jamie Harms, 17, of Wendell, Pamela McClain, 26 of Wendell, Bart Sellers, 16, of Hazelton, and Gary McCord, 16, of Wendell.

Montgomery was cited for driving too fast for road conditions.

Soviets speak on SALT II

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union said Sunday it does not want to achieve military superiority under a new strategic arms limitation agreement, but wants to guarantee its own security.

At the same time, two Soviet newspapers called for mutual understanding as the SALT II negotiations continue and urged American politicians to support the pact.

Both articles were uncharacteristically mild in discussing SALT, and both seemed to underline the importance of a sustained effort to reach agreement.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda, in its important international review section, called for development of mutual trust and recognition of each country's legitimate needs.

"The Soviet Union does not seek military supremacy over the West. What it needs is dependable security and not supremacy," Pravda said in a review by V. Ovchinnikov.

"This security can be reached only through certain trust and an ability to reckon with each other's legitimate interests, which is the essence of our understanding of relaxation of tensions."

Pravda said it would be difficult to conclude a treaty if the United States views the Soviet Union only as an adversary in the talks. It added that the adversary stance could also hamper development of other relations with the United States.

"With such an approach, the working out of new accords is not only agonizingly slow and complicated but relations as a whole stagnate or go backwards, as was the case in the last two years," Pravda said.

The other article in the newspaper Selskaya Zhizn (Rural Life) said the solution to the arms race problem would ensure international security for both countries and contribute to world peace.

Rosalynn Carter in 1978 with John Gacy

Mrs. Carter photographed with accused killer Gacy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A White House photographer snapped a picture of Rosalynn Carter shaking hands with mass killing suspect John Gacy last spring and she later autographed it for him, the White House said Sunday.

Mary Hoyt, Mrs. Carter's press secretary, commented on the picture after the Chicago Sun-Times published a copyright photo of the First Lady with Gacy — now under indictment and suspected of killing 32 young men after having sexual relations with them.

The pictures were taken last May 6 in Chicago at a reception following a Polish Constitution Day celebraton Mrs. Carter attended.

"I can confirm there was a picture taken with Gacy," Mrs. Hoyt said, adding that Mrs. Carter autographed it and probably sent it back to the group which organized the visit.

She said there may have been a dozen pictures taken that day with people involved in the celebration and Gacy, a Democratic precinct captain, was among them.

The picture is signed, "To John Gacy, best wishes, Rosalynn Carter."

It shows Gacy wearing a big "S" on his lapel, indicating he had been given security clearance.

Mrs. Hoyt said it was "an amazing coincidence" that Mrs. Carter had shaken Gacy's hand.

"We went into a reception for Mrs. Carter after the program, at which time pictures were taken with the parade officials. Mr. Gacy was a parade director. There were 50 to 75 people there, including Gov. (James) Thompson and Mayor (Michael) Bilandic."

When Mrs. Carter returned to the White House from Camp David Sunday afternoon, a reporter asked her about the picture. She looked surprised and indicated she was not aware of it.

A Secret Service spokesman would offer no comment except to say he was "looking into the matter."

Mrs. Carter also was photographed with the Rev. Jim Jones of the ill-fated Peoples' Temple group during a campaign visit to San Francisco in September 1976. Jones, who died along with more than 900 of his followers in Jonestown, Guyana, provided some 750 persons for the San Francisco rally, according to earlier news accounts.

The Chicago Tribune, in its Sunday edition, also carried a similar picture of Gacy posing with Mrs. Carter apparently taken at the same function. Spokesmen at both newspapers declined to reveal where they got the prints.

Snail darter may be saved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An Interior Department specialist has recommended against completing a Tennessee dam threatening the snail darter, a two-inch fish made famous by a Supreme Court decision last year, it was revealed Sunday.

Department sources said David Hales, a fish and wildlife expert, has sent Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus a letter endorsing efforts to "provide for the long-term welfare of the endangered species."

The letter calls for removal of the earthen portion of the Tellico Dam on the Little Tennessee River to prevent the extinction of the tiny fish. Dam costs have been placed at $196 million.

Andrus is chairman of the Endangered Species Committee, a panel that will decide whether to allow the Tennessee Valley Authority to close Tellico's floodgates and destroy the sandy streams where the snail darter lives.

The TVA had begun work on the dam when scientists discovered the darter, a member of the snail-eating perch family.

Can U.S. retrieve oil pumped into ground?

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Worried about possible oil shortages induced by the political turmoil in Iran? Have no fear, because the federal government has stockpiled more than 70 million barrels of petroleum for just such an emergency.

There is, however, one small problem: Although the Department of Energy has pumped the crude oil into vast underground salt caverns along the Gulf Coast, nobody at DoE is quite sure how to get it out again.

As a matter of fact, DoE has encountered a few other difficulties with its Strategic Petroleum Reserve (SPR) program, designed to assure the country of a 150-day oil supply in the event of an international crisis. Among those problems:

•In less than two years, DoE's estimate of the cost of the SPR program has more than doubled, from $1.53 per barrel predicted in May 1977 to $3.35 per barrel currently projected.

The original plan called for placing 500 million barrels of oil in storage at a total cost of $7.6 billion. But the big spenders at DoE now are talking about a one billion barrel reserve with a $25 billion price tag.

•Federal officials originally claimed they would have 125 million barrels in storage by the beginning of this year, then boldly doubled that estimate to 250 million barrels. In fact, only about 70 million barrels now are in reserve.

Many of the salt caverns designated to hold the oil proved inadequate, producing major delays in filling them. But the DoE officials buying the crude petroleum continued to order additional shipments at a rapid pace.

As a result, DoE last autumn was paying more than $2 million a month indemurrage — the vessels must stand idle off the coast until the recipient is prepared to accept delivery of the cargo.

Instead of providing a guaranteed supply of oil if imports from a major supplier (such as Iran) are unexpectedly halted or sharply curtailed, the SPR program has become a textbook example of a government undertaking plagued by unforeseen problems, unscheduled delays, cost overuns and miscalculations.

Currently being filled with oil are subterranean caverns near Bryan Mount, Tex.; West Hackberry, La., and Bayou Choctaw, La. A mine at Weeks Island, La. is being prepared and a fifth site is being acquired at Sulphur Mines, La.

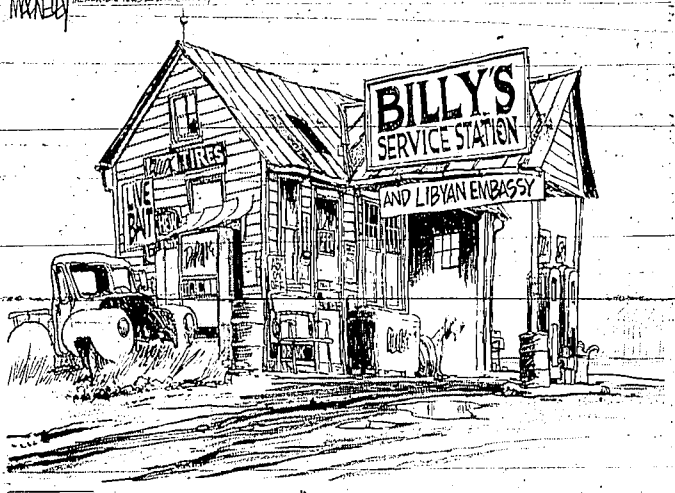

The most publicized event in the history of the program occurred at West Hackberry last year, when DoE contractors allowed too much pressure to build up while pumping oil into a salt dome.

The oil spurted from the cavity, hit a hot diesel engine and ignited. The fire burned out of control for five days, one man was killed, others were burned critically and two drilling rigs were destroyed. Total cost to the taxpayers: $12 million.

"I want to know if anybody in DoE knows anything about drilling into a salt cavity," says Rep. W. Henson Moore, R-La., "That is what happened down there. Nobody knew what the hell they were doing (and) it blew up."

DoE promises to have "withdrawal plans" ready by next summer. By then, it will have dumped more than 125 million barrels of oil into the ground without really knowing how to recover it.

Next time, no grumbling at disaster

Some employees at Magic Valley Memorial hospital apparently had a hard time believing a real disaster had occurred Sunday.

With the Super Bowl on TV, Sunday's genuine call for help in treating victims of a head-on crash in the South Hills sounded like just another drill.

Now, everybody knowns it wasn't a drill.

Eight people were injured in the two- pickup crash and those who complained and joked about the disaster call must feel sheepish indeed.

In this case, everything turned out right.

The grumbling hospital employees showed up for the emergency, and after a bit of jesting, realized the drill was a no-joke case of eight injured people needing attention.

The hospital crew gave the needed medical care well and no lives were lost.

In hindsight, the events at Magic Valley Memorial yesterday probably were instructive.

The real-life disaster with a happy ending demonstrated the importance of being prepared for emergencies, even on Super Bowl Sundays or other days when a disaster would be most inconvenient.

Understandably, Mock-up disasters have a way of lulling even the most competent professionals into thinking nothing serious could every really happen in quiet little Magic Valley.

But disasters can, and eventually will, develop.

When they do, the lives of many people will depend on how quickly and how seriously doctors and medical personnel respond.

Sunday's head-on crash suggests a potentially serious flaw in the disaster preparedness at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

The wreck unveiled a disturbing suggestion that jokes and grumbling might supercede professional decisionmaking.

Next time, the hospital employees should cut the jokes and the laughter on the disaster drills.

Whether the disaster is real or imagined, a hospital employee's sense of professionalism must become the dominant mood of the hour.

RARE II debate heats up

WASHINGTON — As debate over RARE II unfolds in the Pacific Northwest and in Congress, discussion will probably move beyond the basic matter of whether national forest land should be designated as either wilderness or harvestable timber.

RARE II is one of those issues that could become so incendiary that it sets off other inquiries, perhaps into the U.S. Forest Service's competency to manage the national forests.

Under the Roadless Area Review Evaluation program, the Forest Service must consider the wilderness or harvestable timber potential of all of its forest lands that are without road access.

While RARE II was conceived as a national program, as it moves toward Congress the politics of the issue will become regional, even local. In other words, if the citizens of Southern Oregon or Eastern Washington or Northern Idaho become angry about a forest parcel which the Forest Service has or has not included in the RARE II proposal, senators and representatives will hear about it.

As congressmen become awakened to RARE II by their constituents, they are going to learn a lot about how the Forest Service managed this program.

Already in Oregon and Washington, critics of the recently announced RARE II proposal have pointed to some decisions that could prove embarrassing to the Forest Service in the face of Congress.

Consider two Northwest areas proposed for wilderness. The Forest Service recommends for wilderness a 23,000-acre parcel in the Cougar Lakes area of Washington. But in October, 1976, the Forst Service had proposed that a Cougar Lakes wilderness area of 138,854 acres be formed. "Why did the Forest Service change its mind after the RARE II public involvement process?" asks a congressional aide.

Boulder Creek, which is on Oregon's Umpqua River, was not included in RARE II wilderness proposals, despite the fact that Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., had already included it in one of his wilderness proposals.

President Carter proposed that the North Santiam and a northern extension of the Kalmiopsis be made wilderness areas. But both areas were excluded from the Forest Service's wilderness proposal. Why would the Forest Service chief not be as bold as the president has already dared?

Some Northwest environmentalists believe the culprit is Dick Worthington, Pacific Northwest Regional Forester, responsible for Forest Service activities in Oregon and Washington. These critics say that when the record of Forest Service RARE II decision-making is released, Worthington's key role in frustrating some obvious wilderness choices will become clear.

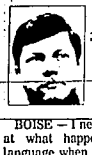

"It looks like it's Worthington," says John Platt, executive director of the Oregon Environmental Council, who has seen the record.

It's not just environmentalists who smell something fishy in the RARE II wilderness recommendations. The generally conservative newspaper, The Oregonian, editorialized that there was too little wilderness for Oregon in the RARE II package.

Add to the Forest-Service-centered debate that is about to begin this kicker: If President Carter proposes later this month that the Forest Service be moved out of the Agriculture Department, as part of reorganization of the federal natural resources agencies, the Congress and national interest groups would quickly choose up sides over the Forest Service.

Debate over reorganization would bring up all of the assorted complaints about the competency of the Forest Service. Plenty of ammunition is available. The General Accounting Office has produced three critical reports in 1978 alone: "Timber Harvest Levels for National Forests — How Good are They?" (Jan. 24, 1978); "Need to Concentrate Intensive Timber Management on High Productive Lands," (May 11, 1978); "The National Forests — Better Planning Needed to Improve Resource Management," (July 12, 1978).

The president has not responded to the Forest Service's RARE II recommendations. His response waits upon a 45-day period of review by federal agencies and a period of comment by elected officials around the country.

English as spoken (butchered) in politics

BOISE — I never fail to be amazed at what happens to the English language when it passes through the political process.

Perhaps I notice it more than most but the English of Politicians keeps reminding me of the images in the funny mirrors at the circus. Everything seems a bit unreal.

For most of us, language is an unconscious process for the expression of ideas. But in politics, language frequently becomes the idea itself, more of a weapon than a tool.

If Gertrude Stein had ever run for the state legislature she would never have insisted a rose is a rose is a rose. In Idaho it isn't.

A few examples have come across my desk in the last two weeks that seem to underscore this point. I offer them as representative of specific categories of linguistic abuse.

The first category is the Governmental Euphenism. This is the phrase which doesn't quite tell the whole story or mean what it seems to mean. The case in point in this instance is a letter I have from the Boise Redevelopment Agency, an organization which has done for Idaho's capitol city what the Huns did for Rome.

The letter announces a public meeting "for the dissemination of information and expression of views on the proposed re-development of an eight-block area," of Boise. That redevelopment, the letter continues, "will adversely affect the Eastman Building" in downtown Boise, a classic architectural structure which is on the National Registry as an historic building.

What the letter doesn't say is that the B.R.A. plan calls for the total demolition of the Eastman Building, and its replacement with a concrete parking garage. Only with a painfully straight face can I call that an "adverse affect" on the building.

With friends like the Boise Redevelopment Agency, our capitol city doesn't need any enemies.

The second example is called the "Official Pronouncement," a category which is most often found in press releases of elected officials. The intent of the "official pronouncement" is to create the impression that without this declaration the described action would not take place, that, in fact, the pronouncement is the cause of the action.

My all-time favorite in this category is a Jan. 9 press release from Idaho Senator Frank Church. Entitled "Church Says Solar Eclipse To Be Visible In Idaho In February," the half-page release says, "Senator Frank Church has been told by the astronomers at the National Science Foundation that the last total solar eclipse in North America during this century can be seen in many communities in Idaho on Feb. 26"

Indeed.

Would the eclipse still have occurred if the foundation's astronomers had allowed Republicans to make the announcement? The GOP's, after all, are the minority party in Congress. The mind boggles at the potential consequences of such an act.

The possibilities suggested by this press release are endless. Senators in our coastal states should perhaps consider officially announcing the rising and setting of the tides. There is historical precedent for this in the reign of King Canute, who surely had authority equal to that of the United States Senate.

A third political abuse of the English language is the hackneyed phrase, also a favorite of press releases. A recent example comes in a "news" release from Sen. Dane Watkins, R-Idaho Falls, calling for support of a constitutional convention to balance the federal budget. "Inflation," Watkins' release says, "is the cruelest tax of all."

You may have heard that before.

Jim McClure used it in his 1972 campaign for the U.S. Senate (and again in 1978).

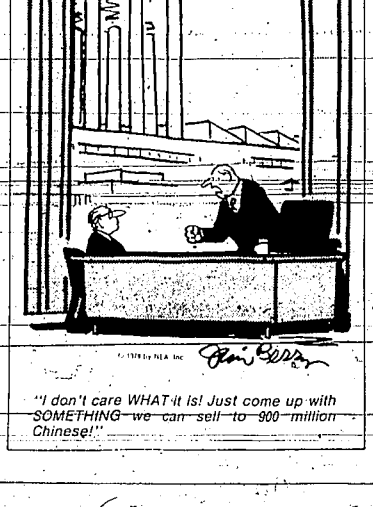

Wayne Kidwell used it in his 1972 race for Congress.

In fact, almost every Idaho politician has used this little number. It sounds terrific, creates an impression of a definite stand on federal spending, but actually says nothing specific at all.

The phrase comes from a book of successful political advertising campaigns. Politicians buy these books to steal ideas which make them sound clever and wonderful. Originally used by a New Jersey businessman who ran for the state legislature, this hackneyed phrase has popped up in almost every major U.S. Senate race in the last five years.

These are just a few examples of the mugging of the English language by politicians. Eventually I plan to collect these and other verbal victims in a two volume work entitled "English As She Is Spoken In Politics." Watch for it at your local bookstore.

Happy birthday offered to the Jaycees

Editor, Times-News:

The week of Jan. 21-27 is United States Jaycee Week. This year Jaycees are 59 years old. During this time the Jaycees have performed many outstanding projects. During 1978 the U.S. Jaycees raised over $1,600,000 for muscular dystrophy, they have been involved in cystic fibrosis and are currently promoting CPR. They have taught many young boys and girls the fundamentals of shooting and sponsor a nationwide shooting education contest. They sponsor soapbox derbies, Junior Miss pageants and winterize homes for the elderly. Many famous people have been Jaycees. President Carter and past president Gerald Ford to name two.

Through the outstanding individual development programs these young men are helped to better themselves and their community. They learn to speak in front of a group, how to set goals and reach them and how to lead people. Some of the projects don't always come through the way they want but the number of people they help surpass the bad. The Twin Falls Jay-C-Ettes wish to thank the Jaycees for their outstanding service and want to wish them a very Happy 59th Birthday.

Of Taiwanese policy

Church seeks clarification

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church said Sunday President Carter has left U.S. attitudes toward Taiwan ambiguous, and Congress should make clear through a resolution that America expects Peking to settle its differences with Taipei peacefully.

Church, D-Idaho, is incoming chairman of the influential Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

In an interview on the CBS "Face the Nation" program, Church said that while he fully supports Carter's decision to recognize Peking—as the government of China, he thinks the president has not adequately stated American expectations that Taiwan will not be attacked.

"The ambiguity is this," he said, "that the president said this last week (in his Tuesday news conference) he had attempted to extract from the Peking government a pledge that they would not attack Taiwan and had failed to do it."

"Well, that blows a hole in our position, and it's a hole I think the Congress must plug."

Church said when Carter sends Congress his plans for setting up a private corporation to deal with Taiwan in the future, a resolution should be proposed to clear up American attitudes toward the island.

He said the resolution should state "that our recognition of Peking as the government of China in no way denigrates our concern for the well-being of the people of Taiwan, and that as our ties with mainland China expand ... it is our expectation that there will be continued peace between the two parts of China ... and the final reconciliation will not be accomplished by force of arms.

Church said the effect of the resolution would be to "put something in writing as to what the American expectation is and let the Chinese on the mainland know that now."

Turkey may build arms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Turkey is linking the future of its U.S. bases with the right to manufacture some American weapons, thus reducing its vulnerability to U.S. arms embargoes, diplomatic sources said Sunday.

The United States and Turkey opened talks on a new defense cooperation agreement in Ankara last week — an agreement increasingly important to NATO defense plans because of the chaos in Iran, the only other U.S. base situated along Soviet borders.

The sources said the two sides reached general agreement on the size of an economic package that would be part of an arrangement in which the United States would get another one-year's lease on its 26 Turkish military bases.

Under the arrangement, the United States would give or lend Turkey $300 million in the first year, subject to congressional approval.

But the sources said the Turks also raised the question of setting up their own facilities to manufacture locally some unspecified weapons that are now supplied from the United States.

Under a similar arrangement, Turkey builds the turrets for tanks supplied by West Germany.

Turkish officials said the reason for the request is that Turkey is in severe financial straits but still wants to fulfill its defense obligations under NATO.

They argue it would be cheaper to equip the 500,000-man Turkish army with weapons manufactured locally.

U.S. officials said the Turks linked this request with further use of the military bases, which have taken on added importance in light of the uncertain future of U.S. bases in Iran.

Listening posts in those two countries monitor Soviet military activity and verify Russian compliance with arms limitation agreements.

U.S. officials said that question of Turkish manufacture of U.S. weapons would be a sensitive issue in Congress, because the United States would lose some of the leverage it gets from the ability to cut off arms sales in the event of disputes with the Turks.

Israeli deadlock persists

JERUSALEM (UPI) — The Israeli cabinet failed Sunday to reach agreement on compromise proposals for amending the Egyptian-Israeli draft peace treaty, forcing U.S. special envoy Alfred Atherton to postpone his departure for Cairo.

"It's going hard," said Eliahu Ben-Elissar, the director-general of Begin's office who is heading the Israeli team which has been negotiating with Atherton since Wednesday.

"Had there been agreement, we would have escorted Mr. Atherton to Ben-Gurion airport" for the flight to Egypt, he said.

Government sources said decisions made by the cabinet during its five-hour meeting did not represent any breakthrough on the two key problems Atherton has been trying to resolve.

After the secret session, Prime Minister Menachem Begin said only that his cabinet did make decisions on issues concerning the draft pact. But he refused to say what these were.

Atherton, who conveyed the new proposals to the Israeli team at a meeting which lasted until 2 a.m. Sunday, met again with the negotiating team for 2 ½ hours after the cabinet session. He told reporters he could not say when he would go to Egypt. He originally was scheduled to depart Sunday.

"All I can say is that the talks will continue tomorrow morning," he said, smiling.

"We still have to do some work," Ben-Elissar said. "I know of progress."

The government sources said Atherton may have to change his plans and to return to Israel following his talks with Egyptian officials. They said Israel would want to hear Egypt's reaction to the proposals before making any final decisions.

Iran in hunger strike

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Nearly 4,000 elite Iranian air force officers and enlisted men went on a hunger strike, demanded withdrawal of all U.S. military advisers and said they would not support any armed forces coup, newspapers reported Sunday.

The revolt at two air force bases was the most serious unrest reported in the armed forces since Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi quit the country Tuesday.

It was a further setback for embattled Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar, whose main support since the shah left has come from the armed forces.

Despite this new problem, however, diplomatic sources reported Bakhtiar had started to gain support among moderate elements, prompting his major political opponent, Ayatolleh Ruhollah Khomeini, to schedule his return to Iran on Friday — sooner than expected — for a showdown battle for control of the country.

An estimated 2,000 demonstrators briefly remapaged through Tehran Sunday and tore up pictures of Khomeini, which replaced portraints of the shah only a few days ago. The demonstrators shouted slogans against Khomeini but there was no violence.

The scuffles followed clashes at Tehran's Technical University earlier Sunday between left-wing students and supporters of Khomeini. No serious injuries were reported in the clash.

The incidents indicated an increasing polarization of Iranian political groups which until the shah's departure last Tuesday were united against his regime.

Several hundred pro-Khomeini students staged sit-ins at the offices of Tehran newspapers Sunday to protest "undue coverage of leftist political activities." The editors rejected the charge, saying they were only exercising press freedoms granted by Bakhtiar when he formed his civilian government Jan. 6.

Will Liza marry her director?

NEW YORK (UPI) — A spokeswoman for Liza Minnelli Sunday angrily denied reports the actress plans to announce her engagement to Mark Gero, the stage manager of her hit Broadway show, "The Act," at a party at Studio 54 Monday night.

The spokeswoman was responding to a story by syndicated columnist Liz Smith in the New York Daily News.

"The story is totally untrue," the spokeswoman said, her voice rising. "Liza is not going to a party, she is not going to Studio 54, she is not announcing her engagement. The story is wrong, 100 percent wrong."

She added, "There is no question that she (Liza) and Mark are going together, but they have no plans to get married at this point. She has to get divorced first."

Wallace wanted to appoint himself

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Maryon Allen said Sunday Alabama Gov. George Wallace wanted to appoint himself to the Senate to succeed her late husband but public opinion was against it and he had to ask her to become an interim senator.

Writing in the Washington Post Magazine, the outspoken Mrs. Allen said she accepted the appointment so that her husband's staff in Washington and in Alabama would not lose their jobs.

James B. Allen died of a heart attack June 1, 1978. Mrs. Allen served the final seven months of his term.

Once the appointment was made, Mrs. Allen said, she refused to make any deals with Wallace not to run for the Senate in her own right.

Mrs. Allen said initially she hesitated about succeeding her husband because she had become "fed up with the total servitude of our lives to the state of Alabama and to the United States Senate," a major heart attack she had suffered in 1970 and "the natural worry to me of whether I could carry on Jim's work ... with any amount of effectiveness."

Cobra bites owner

BARBERTON, Ohio (UPI) — An Akron man bitten by his pet Siamese Cobra was listed Sunday in serious condition in the intensive care unit of Barberton Citizens Hospital where he was a given special serum for the snakebite.

Hospital Public Relations Director Carl Boon said Paul Beaver, 24, was treated with special serum flown in from zoos in Columbus and Cincinnati.

Boon said Beaver, an employee of General Tire, was bitten on a thumb early Sunday, about eight hours after he had purchased the snake Saturday.

Holocaust' will air

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — A West German TV network said Sunday it is going ahead with plans to show "Holocaust," the American series about the Nazi extermination of Jews, despite neo-Nazi threats of violence to block the transmission.

"We bought 'Holocaust' to show people both at home and abroad that we are not afraid to deal with such a shocking theme," said Heinz Werner Huebner, director of the telecast.

A network spokesman said police would guard the stations and transmitting masts to prevent a repetition of last Thursday's bomb attack during the showing of a documentary prelude to "Holocaust."

The first of the four-part "Holocaust" series, dubbed in German, will be telecast throughout the nation Monday night. However, it is being shown on West Germany's third channel, regularly used for regional-interest programs, which attracts a much smaller audience than the two national channels.

The Cologne-based television station WDR paid $543,000 for the nine-hour series, which drew wide audiences in the United States and other countries when it was shown last year.

Neo-Nazis, who have become more militant and active recently, condemned the series on two grounds. Either they approved of the murder of Jews and opposed a program that produced sympathy for the Nazis' victims or they denied there had been any extermination campaign.

Many old Nazis dismiss as propaganda the statement that million of Jews and others were murdered in Nazi concentration camps.

"Every decent German is summoned to prevent the transmission," read a leaflet circulated by an extreme right-wing group calling itself the Independent Circle of Friends.

John Wayne doing well

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Actor John Wayne shows continued improvement in his recuperation from cancer surgery Jan. 12, the UCLA Medical Center reported Sunday.

The hospital issued a terse, 10-word statement on his condition:

"Mr. Wayne continues to improve. His vital signs are stable."

A UCLA spokesman said there would be no further news conferences about his recovery until just before he is released unless there is an adverse development.

Wayne, 71, is expected to leave the hospital in about another week or 10 days.

Childless couple now happy

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Someday Harvey Rovinsky will tell his daughter the story of her birth, and how he took her home from the hospital in a Rolls Royce followed by a sound truck blaring John Philip Sousa marches.

She may not believe him, but it's true.

On Sunday, the proud father literally rolled out the red carpet at Thomas Jefferson University Hospital to welcome the child he and his wife thought they would never have.

The Rovinskis tried unsuccessfully for six years to have a baby. After a number of frustrating visits to doctors who offered little hope, they finally met Dr. Abraham Rakoff of Jefferson's fertility clinic who suggested that Mrs. Rovinsky take fertility drugs.

The drugs worked. Last Wednesday, Mrs. Rovinsky gave birth to a 6-pound, 3-ounce girl — Julia Ann Jakette.

"My feet haven't touched the ground," said Rovinsky, 32, a jewelry store employee who four weeks ago decided that Jakette's birth called for more than just handing out cigars.

In addition to renting the Rolls Royce, he distributed T-shirts which said, "I love Jake;" had a billboard made which read, "Jakette, we love you;" and gave a special gold spoon to the baby. Silver wasn't enough.

At the wheel of the Rolls sat Jakette's grandparents, waiting to lead a caravan of cars laden with bunting and balloons to the Rovinskys' apartment in Andalusia, Bucks County.

"I feel unbelievable," Rovinsky said. "What else can I say? It was a super thing for us. The baby is happy, healthy and great. For the first four months she was pregnant, we didn't tell anybody."

"What can I do to celebrate," he said he had asked himself a few weeks ago.

Dance programs planned for Magic Valley towns

MAGIC VALLEY — Dancer and choreographer Karen Attix will spend three weeks in the Magic Valley during two dance residency programs in Twin Falls and the Wood River Valley.

During a two-week residency from Jan. 24 to Feb. 7, Attix will serve the Wood River Valley Community by giving a series of workshops, informances (a combination of conversations and performances) and a special performance at the Sun Valley Opera House.

During the week of Feb. 20-25, she will tour the Twin Falls and Burley area, giving a performance Feb. 25 at the College of Southern Idaho.

Ms. Attix has performed in New York with the Minna Balls Dance Group and the Kathryn Posin Dance company. As a member of the Merce Cunningham Company, she toured the United States, Australia, Japan, Europe, South America and Israel.

During the first week of her Idaho residency, the dancer and choreographer will be in the Ketchum/Sun Valley area. She will be the guest instructor at the Sun Valley Center's intermediate and advanced modern dance class on Jan. 24, 25 and 26.

An informance for school children will be held at 4 p.m. Jan. 24 at the Hemingway Elementary School in Ketchum.

The public is invited to attend a free informance on Jan. 25 at Hemingway School and another special stretching class for athletes on Jan. 26. Both events will be held in the school's gymnasium at 4:30 p.m.

The second week of her residency will be spent in southern Blaine County at schools in Hailey, Bellevue and Carey.

The dancer and choreographer will perform at 8 p.m. Feb. 2 in the Sun Valley Opera House. General admission tickets are $3 for adults and $1.50 for children.

Ms. Attix's residency is sponsored by the Sears-Roebuck Foundation and the National Endowment for the Arts with assistance from the Idaho Commission on the Arts.

Dancer Karen Attix will conduct Twin Falls, Sun Valley workshops

Twin Falls aide centers suffer from lack of use

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls has probably the best facilities for care of alcoholics and other substance abusers in the entire state, but if they are not better utilized they cannot continue to function.

That was the message given at a dinner Thursday night sponsored by the board of directors of the Magic Valley Alcohol Rehabilitation Center, Inc., at the First United Methodist Church.

Magistrates from throughout Magic Valley, law enforcement officers, substance abuse counselors and other professionals who deal with alcoholism were invited so they could become more aware of the program of residential care, individual counseling and group therapy offered at both the Men's House on Second Avenue South and the Women's Crisis Center on Second Avenue North.

Greg Fuller, board chairman, said the men's facility has space for 17 while the Women's Crisis Center can house nine. But currently both houses have many empty beds.

"We know there are many sick people out there that we could help if only we could get them," Fuller told the group.

Barry H. Meyers, executive director of the board which operates both houses, said that a new policy change at the Women's Center now allows a chemically dependant woman, battered wife or rape victim to bring small children with her.

This policy will be implemented with careful consideration of the other residents, Meyers said.

"Our primary goal is to assist the young mother with a small child where a separation would pose a particular hardship for both the mother and child," the director said.

He said to his knowledge this is the only alcoholism treatment facility in Idaho which offers such a service.

Twin Falls also is the only city in Idaho to have separate facilities for men and women. Both Boise and Pocatello have only one co-ed house, according to Logan Van Pool, regional program manager for substance abuse for the Department of Health and Welfare.

He told guests that "depression is a popular disease, but no one wants to deal with alcoholics because they aren't pretty."

Fuller, who is an attorney, said he consistently has "three or four persons" in the Men's House. He urged wider use of the facilities by lawyers and the courts in dealing with drug-related crime.

A large majority of legal cases he handles are related to alcohol or some form of drug abuse, Fuller said.

Brigham Young team to explore Latin city

PROVO — An archaeology team from Brigham Young University, including students Richard Hansen of Rupert and Gleema Nielsen of Malta, will depart this week to begin excavating one of the last great "forgotten cities" lying hidden in the snake-infested tropical jungles of Latin America.

The ancient Guatemalan city of El Mirador has been entangled and overgrown for nearly 1,500 years, ever since its inhabitants either disappeared or abandoned it for reasons still unclear to researchers.

Dr. Ray T. Matheny, professor of anthropology and archaeology at BYU, will direct the four-month expedition to El Mirador for BYU's New World Archaeological Foundation, which marked its 25th anniversary this week. The research organization has previously concentrated its archaeological work in Chiapas and Campeche, Mexico.

El Mirador, located about 225 miles north of Guatemala City, may be the largest Mayan city ever discovered.

Dr. Matheny explained that the city's ruins were first located by German explorer Teoberg Maler in 1800. Then again in 1970, scientist Ian Graham was documenting stelae for the National Geographic Society in the area and again noted the ruins.

The BYU expedition will be transported to the vicinity of El Mirador from the small city of Flores in Guatemalan Army helicopters. Government officials have given the team permission to establish a small landing strip to allow a supply plane to land at the archaeological site.

"The primary purpose of the expedition will be to conduct a technical investigation into the city," said Dr. Matheny. The preliminary sightings of the main city indicate it could be four or five square kilometers. Some of the buildings are 180 feet — or 18 stories — tall.

On a preliminary investigative trip to the jungle region a year ago, Dr. Matheny said he was obliged to walk through the jungle for three days from the small village of Dos Lagunas. The undergrowth is very thick and infested with poisonous snakes, jaguars, wild pigs and disease-carrying insects.

Grave robbers who live in the vicinity are not friendly to outside visitors and pose another possible threat to the scientific team. Some of the participants in the archaeological venture are students.

"Excitement among our workers is very high," said Dr. Matheny. "Preliminary findings show El Mirador possibly to be a pre-Classic city. Mayans occupied the area from about 600 B.C. to 500 A.D. After it was abandoned the city was never occupied again. Heavy jungle has covered the ruins for centuries, making it difficult today to see the site even from an airplane."

While there, the team will study an ancient water storage system. There are no natural rivers or streams in the area, but there appear to be about 60 ancient causeways suggesting the region once had a thriving agricultural development.

When expedition members arrive at El Mirador, they will cut trees to clear an airstrip and saw the logs into construction lumber with a lightweight chainsaw mill. The wood also will be used to build cabins and a laboratory.

As tombs and house mounds at El Mirador are excavated, the artifacts will be transported to the ancient ruins of Tikal, about 75 miles south of El Mirador. Some artifacts will be taken to Guatemala City for scientific analysis, storage and display.

The investigative team will be working in the jungle during the driest season of the year and hope to utilize a purification system drawing water from small ponds in the area. Much of their food will be obtained by hunting various edible animals found in the jungle.

Dr. Matheny said if further financial support is obtained, the site of El Mirador could be thoroughly excavated during the next decade. Because of its significance, the ruins might develop as one of the most important discoveries for its particular period of pre-Columbian history.

"We believe this expedition is one of the few great adventures remaining in our world," Dr. Matheny said. El Mirador, once a prosperous city with active trade and commerce, is a new frontier for another generation.

Dear Abby

Time 'boys' became men

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
©1979 Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are in our 50s and have two unmarried sons, 25 and 30. They don't live at home. Each prefers to have his own apartment, but we are still providing them with money, food, clothes, etc.

The oldest is a college graduate and employed, but seems to be in debt all the time.

The youngest had only one year of college, and goes from job to job. He's always broke due to poor judgment and minor scrapes with the law. Right now we have a lawyer trying to get his driver's license back, so here we are, bailing him out again.

We love these boys, but I am tired of having to constantly rescue them from their mistakes. At our age, my husband and I should be looking out for our own welfare, but our sons are a constant drain on us financially as well as emotionally.

What do other parents do in such a situation, Abby? And what do you suggest?

TIRED PARENTS

DEAR TIRED: At 25 and 30 it's time your "boys" were men. Perhaps they have never become responsible and self-supporting because you have always rushed in to rescue them when the going got rough.

Though motivated by "love," you have done them a disservice. You will not always be around to bail them out. Tell them that from now on they are on their own. They will respect you for it, and it might make men of them yet. I hope so.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is in the third grade and recently had a birthday party. She took the invitations to school and passed them out to the classmates she wanted. There were 29 kids in her class and she wanted only 23 of them at her party.

After the party her teacher called me and told me that my daughter should not have passed out her invitations at school unless she invited all the kids in her class.

Since when does a schoolteacher have the right to tell a pupil whom to invite to her birthday party? I would like your opinion in print.

OUTRAGED

DEAR OUTRAGED: Three cheers for the teacher! She is obviously much more understanding than you. The pain of having been left out will remain with those six uninvited children long after the fun has been forgotten by those who attended.

DEAR ABBY: I know a couple who live within blocks of his widowed 80-year-old mother.

They never visit her during the year. They call her on the phone maybe a couple of times a year.

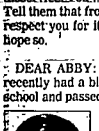

On Mother's Day they send her a card with some money in the envelope. On the card is written: "Buy yourself something."

If you were that mother would you accept the money?

CLOSE RELATIVE

DEAR CLOSE: That would depend on how I felt about the givers.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hill, Calif. 90212.

Bad dreams sap energy

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb,

I don't know how many other people have my problem but I've had it a long time and it's getting worse. Basically, I am a happy, outgoing person of 33. The problem is my dreams. Every single morning I wake up exhausted and nervous because I have vivid dreams on every imaginable subject. Half of the dreams don't make any sense. They are sapping my energy. When I wake up it takes me a while to unwind.

I get tired during the day. Even if I take a short nap of 10 minutes the dreams continue. I cannot remember the last time that I have gone to sleep for any length of time and have not had a vivid dream, being awakened on edge. I have become extremely irritable and am turning into a nervous wreck. Any advice you might give would be greatly appreciated. Please do not suggest a psychiatrist because I really don't think I need one.

Dear Reader,

You might not want to see a psychiatrist, but he is usually the specialist who is most knowledgeable about the problems of sleep. In fact, most sleep centers around the country are run by psychiatrists. Stop and think a minute, sleeping is a function of the brain so why should you be so opposed to seeing a specialist who is knowledgeable in brain function disorders.

Basically, your problem is inadequate or poor sleep. I am sending you The Health Letter number 10-6, Sleep and Insomnia. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. This issue will tell you all about the different phases of sleep and give you basic information that you need on problems related to not being able to get to sleep, stay asleep or sleep well.

People tend to remember the dream they had just before they wake up. In a person who has normal sleep cycles, these are the dreams that occur during the time the eyes are moving rapidly (called the REM phase).

If you are having as much difficulty as it appears from your letter, why don't you try to go to a sleep center and let them record the different phases of sleep and note the time of your dreams. They won't be able to tell the content of your dreams but they will be able to tell when you are dreaming.

By identifying what your specific sleep pattern is you may be able to get some additional help that would permit you to sleep more soundly and get some real benefit from your sleep. Everybody dreams and very often dreams don't make sense — at least to the person who is not trained in dream analysis.

Don't be so disturbed about the content of your dreams, but you have a right to be distressed about not being able to get restful sleep. I might add that taking sleeping pills is usually not the answer to these situations. They may be useful temporarily during an acute situation one or two times but they should certainly not be used on a chronic basis.

The problem with the use of sleeping pills is discussed in more detail in The Health Letter that I am sending you.

MacKenzie's pottery techniques will be shared in workshops

Warren MacKenzie to visit Sun Valley ceramics center

SUN VALLEY — Warren MacKenzie will be the visiting artist at the Sun Valley Center's Ceramics Department for two weeks beginning Jan. 29.

A well-known potter of functional stoneware and porcelain, MacKenzie will set up his own studio to produce, glaze and fire a new body of work while in residence. The 10-day workshop is offered as part of the year-round intermediate/advanced ceramics program, but is also open to the general public upon application.

MacKenzie has had numerous one-man and group exhibits in museums of the mid-west and east. He is intensely involved with craftsmanship, and his work is as famous for its beauty as for its functionality.

During his residency, he will schedule demonstrations of production pottery techniques, glazing and firing. On Feb. 1, he will be guest speaker at the Sun Valley Center's visual arts lecture series. He will talk about his own work and other American potters at 8 p.m. in the Ketchum/Sun Valley Community School. From 7 to 9 p.m. on Feb. 2, MacKenzie will give a demonstration on throwing techniques. An exhibit of his work will be on show at the Sun Valley Center Gallery from Feb. 4-21, with an open house scheduled from 7 to 9:30 p.m. on Feb. 4. He will also give a talk at the Center Gallery Feb. 6 at 8 p.m. The public is invited to attend these talks and demonstrations. For further information, call the center registrar at 622-9371.

Seeking a distinctive car? Here are several prospects

By DAN JEDLICKA
©Chicago Sun-Times

Anyone who buys a house that doesn't appreciate in value is thought to be awfully dumb.

However, nobody thinks harshly of people who buy cars that depreciate in value. Of course, one doesn't find autos that will climb in value on every block. He has to look for them. With experience, he can eventually learn which ones are worth purchasing.

Many owners of these special cars don't drive them because they fear damage. The prospect of putting them in a parking lot, which can resemble a demolition derby if it's near crowded stores, is enough to make a strong man tremble.

I recently received a letter from a woman who owns, with her husband, a silver Maserati. She was wondering about the best way to sell it. She gave her telephone number, so I called her.

"The car is perfect, and we love it," she said. "But we bought a home and need the money from the car's sale to fix it up."

I told her that I live in the same suburb but had never seen the auto. "Oh, we don't drive it during the winter," she said.

Then I told her that she should sell it for more money than she paid for it, although it is a 1975 model. This fact seemed to astonish her, and she naturally was cheerful when she hung up. It's a $20,000-plus auto.

A car generally is the second largest big-ticket item most people buy. Why not consider it a handsome investment? One should use an auto that'll go up in value as a second car. Then it can be driven under controlled conditions. Knock around in a clunker.

Everyone can't afford a Maserati, but there are many older cars which are reasonably priced when you consider what they'll be worth just two years from now. I've listed a number of such autos in past articles, but will concentrate only on the cheaper ones here. Back away fast from anyone who wants a fortune.

Remember that these cars should be unmodified. Also make sure that they run decently. You shouldn't be doing much driving in them, but they must be driven occasionally to keep them in shape. Besides, you're entitled to have some fun with them.

You will. These autos have a considerably different feel, compared to today's new cars. There are a sizable number of them, but here are good examples:

The original Ford Mustang: Any body style is OK, but make sure it has a V-8.

Jaguar XK-140, XK-150 and E-Type: Forget the XK-120. Owners put this model under glass.

MG TD, TF and A: The TC model, which is mechanically inferior to these other MGs, costs a fortune and is treated by owners like the XK-120. MG purists don't like the TF, but they're being silly. This works to your advantage. You're not fighting them to get the car. There are plenty of A models knocking around. The MG A coupe is a prime find.

Nash-Healey: Nobody knows what it is. It's an especially neat sports car. I've a friend who has stored one a decade in a garage in an ultra-conservative Midwest community. Everyone there seems to drive Fords and Chevrolets. You don't have to go to California to find the autos mentioned here.

Dual-Ghia: Once a favorite of Frank Sinatra's "Rat Pack," it's virtually an unknown commodity to people living in the Midwest. This means you might be able to get it for a really low price. If the average motorist saw it advertised in a newspaper, he'd think there was a misprint in the ad.

Sunbeam Tiger: It's a conservatively styled British sports car with a Ford V-8 that'll practically snap off your neck if you accelerate hard.

Apollo GT: A beautiful Grand Touring (GT) auto with a Buick V-8. Only rabid car buffs know what it is. This type of auto sometimes ends up being owned by someone who feels he's got a real oddball that isn't worth much.

Triumph TR-3: It has unique styling, good handling and plenty of power. The TR-2 was the first one sent to America, but it's ugly; it looks like someone bashed in its grille with a giant boot.

Austin-Healey: One of the slickest-looking sports cars ever built, it's got plenty of muscle. Forget about trying to get the first ones, which had four-cylinder engines. They're too rare, especially the Le Mans model. Opt for those with six-cylinder engines.

Chevrolet Corvair: Buy one of the late 1960s models. They're beautiful.

Volvo P1800: I've seen many of these around Chicago in great condition. It looks like a sports car, but is really a Grand Touring machine that's built like a tank.

You can try for autos like two-seat Ford Thunderbirds and the first Chevrolet Corvettes, but you'll be wasting your time. Owners of these cars know exactly what they've got and will ask small fortunes.

Play the game right, and you can be in their position.

Better use of energy explained

NEW YORK (UPI) — The energetic Finns are staging three seminars in the United States this month trying to sell American communities on Finnish technology to produce and use energy better.

They are concentrating on three fields: District heating, using peat as a fuel and the development of economical, small hydroelectric generators.

The first seminar was in Washington, the second will be in New York Jan. 23 and the third in Chicago Jan. 25. The federal Department of Energy is co-sponsoring the programs.

None of the technology the Finns will be describing is radically new, but because of the geographical peculiarities of their country, the Finns have developed expertise and hardware in these areas that they feel the United States could make use of.

Take district heating. In New York, although Consolidated Edison Corp. has piped steam to apartment houses and other buildings in Manhattan for decades, most Manhattan buildings have their own heating plants.

The idea of selling steam heat as well as electricity all over their marketing areas has barely come to the notice of most American utilities.

By contrast, almost 20 percent of the buildings in Finland are heated by steam supplied by the electric power industry. In some Finnish cities, 50 percent of all heating steam is supplied from central plants.

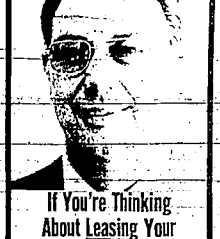

The Finns believe many American utilities could use their technology to produce and market steam for district heating along with electricity at a profit. Speakers at the seminars will discuss the engineering and cost factors involved.

Even though Energy Secretary James Schlesinger has urged American utilities to burn gas temporarily and delay conversion to coal, the Finns believe the United States ultimately should utilize peat as well as coal to generate energy as petroleum fuels become more scarce.

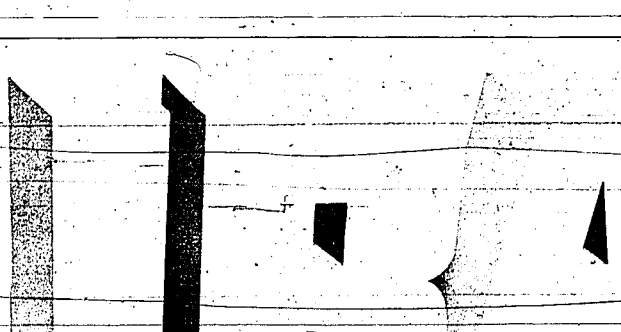

Next to Ireland and the Soviet Union, the Finns probably are the biggest users of peat fuel in the world. The Scots burn a lot of peat too — Scotch whiskey has a characteristic peat flavor.

The United States has a lot of peat as well as coal and lignite. The biggest deposits are in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan. Peat accounts for only 2 percent of Finland's energy generation (in contrast with one-third for Ireland) but there has been a dramatic increase in the past three years.

Here's a tax break you can retire on.

It's during the productive, "money making" years that people should initiate some type of savings program to meet retirement needs. But it's during those same money making years that people usually pay the highest taxes, leaving little to save for retirement. An Idaho First Individual Retirement Account can help solve this dilemma.

If you're not presently covered by an employer retirement program you should start your Idaho First IRA now, and take a personal tax deduction equal to the amount of your contribution (up to $1,500). Your money will earn interest at the highest allowable rate, and you won't pay any income tax on either the contribution or its earnings until you retire. By starting an IRA, you are providing today for retirement tomorrow, and lowering your taxes at the same time.

There are some qualifying rules anytime you get a tax break like this. Just drop in. We'll be happy to review the entire Idaho First IRA plan with you. . .no obligation.

Give yourself a tax break today. . . for tomorrow.

A good day for Ariens to clear their slates; Piscens may have a trip in their future plans

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are under good influences for seriously considering a new and improved set of circumstances whereby you can gain a well-rounded expression of your goals. Good for investigating what you do not understand.

ARIES (March 21 to Apr. 19) A good time to clear the slate for bigger activities ahead. Be more supportive of your loved ones and get good results.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Cement better relations with associates through discussions and operate more intelligently in the future. Don't take on any unnecessary expenses.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Schedule your time so that you can accomplish a great deal. Talk over work with co-workers and plan it well as to individual duties.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Show more affection for loved ones and get good response. Plan for amusements you want to enjoy later on.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Improve conditions at home where needed so that you don't have to worry about them. Be careful of details in an important matter.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Organize routines better so that they work more efficiently in the future. Confer with associates and come to a fine meeting of minds.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) You now understand better how to handle important monetary affairs and make progress. If you have any doubts, consult with an expert.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You are capable of getting whatever you want most, so go after such now. Be charming with those you love and admire.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Take time to be alone and plan the future with greater clarity and intellect. Meet with an adviser and be well guided.

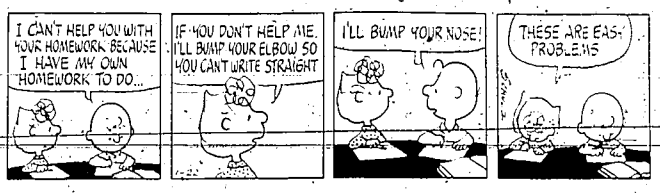

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get in touch with clever friends and gain their advice, support for your aims. Enjoy socializing together later. Pay bills on time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Make good use of today by handling personal and business matters efficiently. Use standard, orthodox methods.

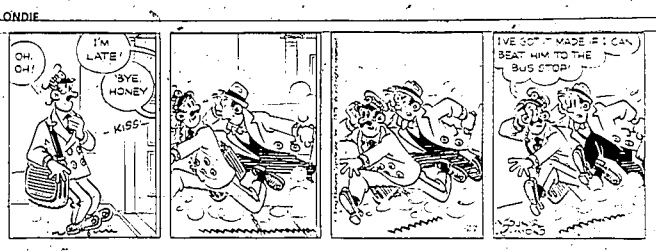

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You get many brilliant ideas now and should make notes of them. Plan a trip for some good purpose. Take no risks where health or reputation is concerned.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be magnetic and full of vim and vigor and will have a great ability in investigative matters. Be sure that the environment is good so that an inferiority complex does not develop. There could be a fine acting ability here, also.

What's what

Rev. William A. Spooner had a way with words; only trouble was that the words were twisted

The Rev. William A. Spooner, warden of New College, Oxford, is credited, too, with the remark, "My boy, it is kisstomary to cuss the bride." You remember Rev. Spooner. He referred to Her Royal Majesty as "our queer old dean." And he told a church usher, "Please sew me to another sheet. Someone is occupewing my pie."

You've heard that expression "get in the last licks" Comes from the final skirmish of the American Revolution at Mt. Olivet, Ky., which was known as the Battle of Blue Licks. Or so a kindly client avers.

"The world is divided into good people and bad people and the good people decide which is which." Who said that?

Bury's is the name of a funeral home in Kenmore, N. Y.

PEARL HANDLES?

Q. "Didn't Gen. George S. Patton wear a pair of pearl handled .45 revolvers?"

A. Ivory handled, not pearl handled. Patton once said only a procurer in a bordello would wear a pearl handled pistol. Those weren't his exact words, as I recall. But that's pretty close.

Q. "How far can a coral snake strike?"

A. Strike it doesn't. Among poisonous snakes, the coral is an oddball. It just crawls up, bites, hangs on, and chews.

Q. "What's the plural of 'insignia'?"

A. That's it. The singular is "insigne."

TREES

What's a tree worth? Might figure $100 a year of its age. That's how the city of Des Moines, Iowa, values its trees. When a car banged into a 6-year-old oak there, the driver's insurance company paid on demand the $600, considering it a good settlement. So what's the point? Don't know, just that the worth of trees seems to have changed so much over the years. Forty years ago in the northern woods, $600 would have been a fortune for a tree. Now I can see a great oak beyond the window here that I wouldn't take $5,000 for.

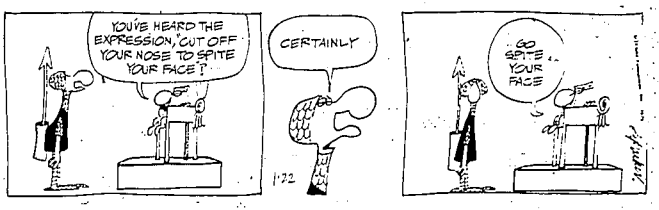

Best way to cope with that thing called stress is to do something wacky. Or so contends a psychologist at an esteemed southern university. To deal with his own tensions, he says, he soaks his feet in Jell-O.

Filer farmer protests EPA parathion ban

TWIN FALLS — Bees may die when he uses it, but Filer farmer Dean Ruhter said he needs encapsulated methyl parathion to farm successfully.

Ruhter, who grows peas near Rock Creek, is starting his own private protest against an Environmental Protection Agency investigation of the pesticide which may result in a ban of the poison.

"I am sure that we killed the bees (when using methyl parathion), but I don't know whose fault it was," Ruhter explained. "I think the beekeeper has some responsibility."

Ruhter's protest follows a recent visit by EPA official Dan Bench to the Buhl and Castleford area. Bench sampled pollen from hives in which large numbers of bees died mysteriously last spring and summer.

Bench said he will test the samples to try to find out what killed the bees.

Local beekeepers said they suspect an encapsulated form of methyl parathion of killing the bees. Sold in Magic Valley under the brand name of Penncap-M, the chemical is a derivative of certain war-time nerve gases and acts on an insect's nervous system to cause death. The chemical is also dangerous to human beings.

But danger or not, Ruhter said he would have a difficult time growing a good pea crop without it and plans to protest the investigation and possible ban of the chemical.

"It is one of the best chemicals for the price," Ruhter explained. "It will take care of both the pea weevil and aphids. Because of its residual (long-lasting action) it is valuable for long hatches."

Because of its encapsulated form, the methyl parathion in Penncap-M is released over a long period of time as its wet carrier medium gradually dries out and allows the poison to escape and become active.

"It gives you a chance to go in before you maybe could with some other chemical and it will last longer," Ruhter said.

Ruhter said the chemical kills all insects in the field and if bees happen to be there, they will surely die, too.

But he claimed a beekeeper has a responsibility to protect his own bees if they are in the area.

"I am not too sure the bees are not trespassing on the property when they come onto a private individual's crop," Ruhter said. "And I think they might be stealing the pollen from the property in the process."

Ruhter said part of the problem stems from the fact that bees can roam up to three miles from their hives on foraging jaunts.

"If you look at a map, you could put beehives outside all the towns in Twin Falls County, like Filer, Buhl, Castleford, and Twin Falls and cover the whole county," he said. "That's the reason it scares me what the beekeepers are doing."

He said a beekeeper who puts his bee yard in a corner of a field has no control over what fields the bees will frequent in search of food.

"There are some alternatives (to banning methyl parathion)," Ruhter said. "The keeper knows that a farmer is going to spray at certain times of the year.

"They can move their bees at that time. They could find out where the majority of the peas or a certain crop is growing and they can maybe keep their bees out of that area."

Ruhter said he plans to write to his congressmen and appear on radio and television shows to publicize his protest campaign.

Hospital proposals on agenda

TWIN FALLS — The first of three hospital management contract proposals will be presented to the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital Board tonight.

Representatives of American Medical International will be the first to make their official presentation following a survey of the local hospital.

Two other organizations, Hospital Affiliates International and the Northwest Medical Foundation, a subdivision of the Seventh Day Adventist Church, have received permission to conduct their own evaluation of the county-owned hospital prior to making formal management contract proposals.

Representatives of all three firms have talked informally with hospital and county officials in the last few months. All are eager to have a role in health care in Twin Falls.

Board members appeared receptive to informal presentations by the firm representatives last month. Earlier last fall they turned down a proposal from the Hospital Corporation of America, but since then support for further investigation of other private management firms has come both from the medical staff and petitions bearing some signatures of some 2,000 county residents.

Hospital board officers will be elected and monthly reports will be given. Former Chairman Joe Savage of Kimberly was not reappointed to another term. Clarence Hollifield of Hansen is currently vice president.

New appointees include Jack Claiborn Jr. of Kimberly; Melba Cook of Twin Falls and DeVon Andersen, Murtaugh high school principal. County commissioners reappointed Ted Pence of Buhl, Clinton Quigley of Castleford and Doll Smith of Twin Falls.

Farmers seek 'friend' status

CASTLEFORD — A group of Twin Falls area farmers will ask the Idaho Supreme Court for "friend of the court" status in a condemnation lawsuit being appealed to the high court.

The Twin Falls Water Users, an ad hoc group headed by Donald Martens of Buhl, has asked for the status to influence the decision of the court on a request to condemn the Twin Falls High Line Canal which was denied last fall in Fifth District Court.

The water users served as "amicus curiae" in the case of Canyon View Irrigation vs. Twin Falls Canal Company when Judge Sherman Bellwood ruled Canyon View had no right to condemn a right-of-way through the Twin Falls canals.

Canyon View had asked the court to rule on its right to condemn the canal to transport water it owns to the Bruneau Plateau for irrigation purposes.

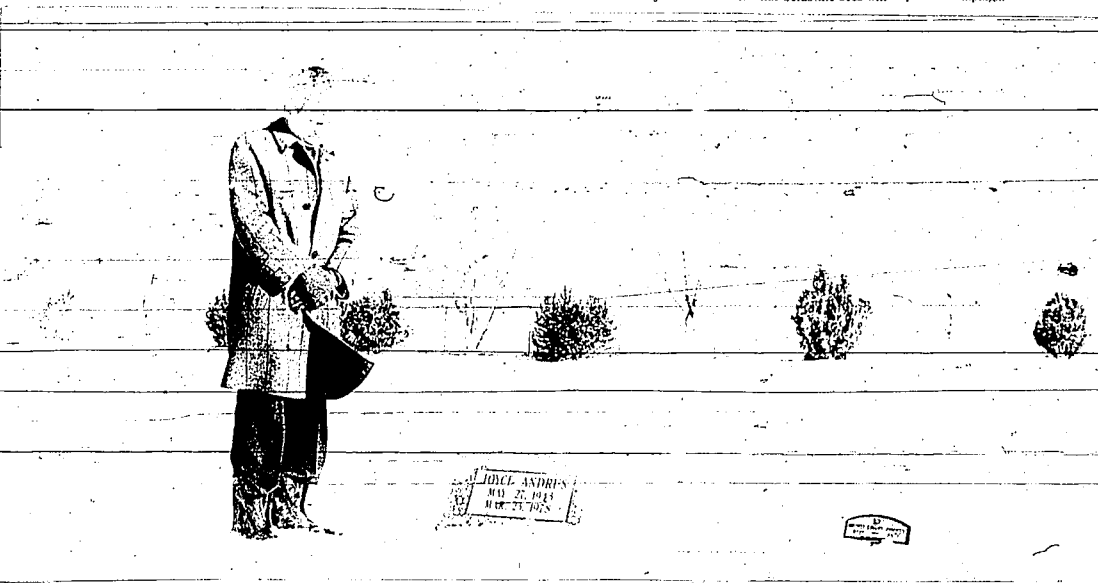

When Bellwood ruled against the would-be developers, they appealed to Idaho's highest court.

Ted Quigley, a spokesman for the water users, said the group also plans to hire a Boise attorney to represent their interests with regard to another proposal to irrigate the Bruneau Plateau.

He said the group is watching with a wary eye the activities of the Idaho Water Resources Board which has proposed to bring water to the plateau by gravity flow within the next decade to replace costly high lift pump irrigation now in use.

"The thing we are most interested in is this Canyon View appeal," Quigley said. "We are asking people in the Twin Falls tract to donate 10 cents a share for the appeal."

Quigley said once necessary documents have been sent from Fifth District Court to the Idaho Supreme Court, Canyon View will have about 28 days to make additional statements and then the canal company will have about 30 days to respond.

Valley School Superintendent Arlyn Bodily reflects on the lives of Joyce and Monte Andrus buried side-by-side in Hazelton

Valley's athletic director

A prophetic ending for Monte Andrus

By RAY SULLIVAN
Times-News writer

HAZELTON — Monte Andrus didn't have a red "S" on his chest and he wasn't nearly as tall.

But the late athletic director of Valley School District struck most people who knew him as being just as super as the folk hero of America comicdom.

He would have been pleased at being called super because it was his favorite word. Invariably, anyone asking him how things were going, how he felt or how his teams were playing would hear a vibrant "Super!"

Joyce and Monte Andrus

And life had been super for 16 of the 17 years he had been teaching in the school district. That picture dimmed last March when his 34-year-old wife, Joyce, died of a liver ailment.

Andrus died of a heart attack last Dec. 13 at age 39. It came a few hours after he had administered "spats" to 7 to 10 seventh graders at Hazelton Elementary School for cutting up in class.

With his death, the 5-foot-4 seventh grade teacher prophetically fulfilled a statement he had uttered many times to friends and relatives. Andrus said he didn't think he would live to age 40 because of his family's history of heart trouble. His father and mother died of heart attacks at ages 40 and 52, respectively.

Although several friends and relatives say it probably didn't lead to his death, the veteran teacher and coach had a rough day at work the Wednesday he died.

He had returned to his classroom near the end of lunch hour and found students, kept inside because of extremely cold weather, out of their seats, acting rowdy and cutting up as 12- and 13-year-olds will do.

For reasons unknown to friends and school officials, Andrus felt the best way to handle the situation then was to paddle some of the youngsters.

Shortly after 7 p.m. that night, Andrus slumped over dead on a couch in Dan Sellers' Hazelton home. Sellers, who teaches fifth-graders at Hazelton, said Andrus was a little keyed up over a call from an angry parent.

Sellers, who had a boy in the class, said he told Andrus he had done the right thing and to relax. Sellers had just turned away to watch television when, "the next thing I knew the drink fell over and he fell over on my lap."

Sellers discounts the thought that the paddling incident led to his friend's death.

"I don't know, myself," he said last week. "One night last fall, Valley was playing a football game against Declo. He said he had pains in his chest and that he could hardly breath. This was on the sidelines. He got highly excited. He got uptight about things. I told him to sit down in the stands and relax."

The Saturday before he died, Andrus had complained to Sellers of being short of breath and tired after a day of skiing with one of his children.

A parent of one of the paddled youngsters, who asked not to be identified, said the spanking incident wasn't like Andrus at all.

"The kids idolized him. They miss him a lot now. He just wasn't himself that day, there's no question in my mind. Of course, we'll never know now."

Arlyn Bodily, superintendent of the school district, naturally agrees. He and Monte roomed together before they both got married. Bodily stood up for Monte and Joyce 14 years ago when they drove to Elko to be married. And he is married to Joyce's niece, Norma.

Friendship and relations aside, the superintendent believes Andrus was a good teacher because, "the kids liked him. I just think he cared and the kids knew he cared."

That care showed in the numerous projects Andrus conducted with Valley School District children of all ages. Besides being athletic director, he coached seventh and eighth grade football, girls junior varsity basketball and seventh grade boys basketball and boys and girls junior high school track. Summers were devoted to running and coaching baseball for Hazelton youngsters.

Bodily readily admits he may have reviewed the mass spanking incident if the day hadn't ended so sadly, but says there have been no repercussions from the incident. He also believes Monte wasn't mad at the youngsters.

"I would hope (the kids spanked) would know Monte did what he thought was right, that it wasn't anything at them personally," Bodily said, "that it was something that had to be done, that he didn't think they should have been doing what they were doing, naturally."

Hazelton Principal Bryce Sorensen said, "To me, (the paddling) was not an important item in his life at all, really. When he paddled he never was . . . he was after the problem, he wasn't after the kid."

Natural gas prices due to increase

TWIN FALLS — Users of natural gas in Idaho will face some rate increases in the next few years but they will be about the same level as the most recent 6.5 percent increase, not 50 to 70 percent as predicted in national media.

This is the belief of Reed Penning, vice president in charge of gas supplies for Intermountain Gas Co. Penning addressed a recent luncheon of the Twin Falls Rotary Club.

He said there is no shortage of natural gas, especially in states such as Idaho.

"There was never an energy crisis in relation to natural gas, it was a legislative crisis," Penning said. "As soon as President Carter removed the restrictions prohibiting us from selling gas across state lines, the crisis ended."

Penning said Intermountain Gas Co. buys only about one-third of its supply from domestic sources and two-thirds from Canada. He said he trusts the political controls of Canada more than those in the United States and believes as long as the United States users are able to pay the Canadian companies a reasonable rate for the gas it will keep coming.

Penning said several winters ago factories were shutting down in some eastern states and home use was being held to a minimum because of gas shortages.

"There was no shortage in Idaho but we were prohibited from sending our surpluses to those energy-short areas because of legislation prohibiting shipping across state lines. As soon as this restriction was lifted the situation was back under control," the speaker said.

"In Idaho we can grow to serve about double the present number of domestic customers with no additional cost except running the line to the individual homes," Penning said. "We have already spent money to build storage facilities in Utah, Idaho and Washington which will serve future needs.

The speaker said a bill before last year's congressional session was defeated by the Senate and fortunately for the gas industry has been completely reworked and is now ready for current congressional approval.

"It isn't a perfect bill," he said, "but it will go a long way toward correcting industry problems because it contains no price controls. I think if we had taken all of the price controls off some time ago, the prices would have climbed and then dropped back down of their own accord through deregulation.

Penning said when efforts were being made to obtain gas from Canada several winters ago, Canadians were not especially interested in doing business.

"Then someone thought of paying them a little more for their product and service and since then we have been getting all the gas we need," Penning said.

Following the meeting, Penning said the financial problems of Intermountain Gas Co. of last spring are resolved. He said the warm weather which reduced consumption, the firm's unsuccessful retail appliance sales division and the lag from price regulations caused the difficulty but all have been corrected.

He said rate increases sought by the company have to be based on the previous year's experiences. Conditions in a year to a year and a half can change considerably, causing the company to absorb higher operational costs with no chance of recovery over a period of time, the vice president said.

Surplus federal funds may aid local planning

TWIN FALLS — Cities and counties in Magic Valley with a need for funds to help in comprehensive planning projects may be able to take advantage of $16,000 in surplus funds.

Members of Region 4 Development Association were told Thursday afternoon an allocation of $20,000 to the region for planning grants has not been fully used. About $16,000 is still available to qualified projects in the region.

John Yates, planning director said the funds could be used by any city or county in preparing comprehensive plans or in updating or revising such plans or zoning ordinances and regulations. Yates said the funds should cover several small planning projects of $3,000 to $5,000 in size. He said the funds would not be allowed for engineering or design planning of specific projects.

Yates said Jerome and Burley have already made applications for suitable projects.

Tom Fleming, administrative officer for Region 4 Development Association, told board members in a summary report from Jan. 1, 1978, to the present time, the region has assisted in application for $5.4 million in grants, and has had $6.9 million in projects funded in the ongoing program. Proposed projects on the books at this time total $1.6 million. During the period in question proposals, applications, grants funded and those rejected involve $16 million, the report shows.

CETA grants funded totaled $1.09 million. Economic Development district projects include $1.6 million proposed, $400,000 applied for, $184,000 funded while EDA public works projects include $3.7 million funded. Under the EDA 304 technical assistance program, $30,000 has been funded and $29,000 rejected. Farm Home Administration applications total $1.3 million with none funded as yet; Housing and Urban Development block grants totaled $2.4 million in applications and no projects funded as yet. Housing and Urban Development Action grants include $1.25 million in applications and no funding.

Included in the EDA applications is $400,000 for Twin Falls city for a canyon access road and the $184,000 funded for Shoshone city's water improvement. The College of Southern Idaho vocational technical school is proposed at $1.6 million with application pending.

Local EDA public works projects funded include $260,000 for Bellevue city street improvements in 1977; $99,600, Fairfield city hall and fire station; $81,000 Wendell city streets; $175,000 Gooding city arterial water lines and $320,000 Gooding city hall; $434,000 Blaine county judicial building, and $2.4 million, Ketchum water system improvement, all funded in 1978.

FmHA applications include $800,000 for the Filer city water system and $544,000 for Hazleton city water system.

Applications on file for HUD block grants include Hansen city for water, streets and parks, $1.5 million; Filer city, water improvements, Buhl city water improvements and Rupert city water improvements, $300,000 each, all applied for 1979 appropriations.

Rupert city has also applied for $750,000In. Housing and Urban Development action grant and Jerome city has applied for $500,000 for community center and water system improvement funds under the same program.

The Thursday meeting, the first of 1979, was conducted by Chris Talkington, a Twin Falls city council member, as newly elected board chairman.

Ready for the move

These eighth graders at Vera C. O'Leary Junior High School don't seem to be minding the move from the present school on Shoshone Street to the new $4 million structure on Eastland Drive. Eighth graders (left to right) Tami Cameron, Penny Olsen, and Cindy Fry moved their desks last week into the old O'Leary gymnasium in preparation for the move to the new school. Today, Tuesday and Wednesday have been designated "moving days" at the school. Thursday school will start again at the new school.

A prophetic ending for Monte Andrus

Andrus' death shortly after the incident was "more coincidence than anything else," Sorensen said.

Calling Monte a "good teacher, cooperative, he worked well in the system," the principal said Hazelton students always give presents to their teachers at Christmas. This year, his students gave the presents to the two Andrus children, Tammy, 14, and Kip, 7.

"To me, it shows no resentment. They all c[illegible]d in," Sorensen explained.

Despite Andrus' family history of heart trouble, Arlyn and Norma Bodily believe Joyce's untimely death March 23, 1978, contributed equally to his death.

"Monte never did get over the loss of Joyce," Arlyn says. "He told us a hundred times he couldn't live without her . . . she handled everything, cooking, laundry, finances. He did not know where anything was."

The Bodilys think Monte must have sensed his life would be short-lived after his wife died. When he arranged Joyce's funeral, he bought gravesites for himself and the children, and a headstone for his grave that matched hers.

Besides taking care of the family, Joyce took an interest in much of her husband's extracurricular activities and attended sports events with the children.

She had quit her part time job with the U.S. Post Office in Eden to work with the school district's special education program as a teacher's aide. Then, last January, relatives said her skin color was yellow and a checkup showed a liver ailment.

Two months later, despite treatment at the University of Utah Medical Center in Salt Lake City, she died.

A bike-a-thon by Hazelton and Eden residents raised several thousand dollars to help Monte pay some of Joyce's medical expenses.

Andrus' spirits picked up during football season, but only until the holidays.

At the annual Hazelton Music Concert, Bodily said Monte asked the band to strike up a favorite, "Jingle Bell Rock," because he didn't know if he'd be around Christmas to hear the tune.

Steelers: Super champions again

MIAMI, Fla. (UPI) — It was the most exciting Super Bowl ever played and Terry Bradshaw made it his personal showcase.

Bradshaw capped the greatest season of his nine-year pro career with a spectacular record-shattering performance Sunday when he threw for four touchdowns and 318 yards to lead the Pittsburgh Steelers to a 35-31 victory over the Dallas Cowboys in Super Bowl XIII.

The victory brought the Steelers an unprecedented third Super Bowl.

Bradshaw rewrote the Super Bowl record book for passing as he threw touchdown passes of 28 and 75 yards to John Stallworth and 7 yards to Rocky Bleier, all in the first half, and then hit Lynn Swann with a clinching 19-yard touchdown pass in the last period.

"I didn't want to get away from what brought us here," said Bradshaw. "Play- action on first down, play-action on second down. I got excellent protection. This victory makes me very happy. A lot of people thought we were too old and finished after we didn't make the last two years. This was a game between the two best teams in the National Football League and the best team won."

Steeler Coach Chuck Noll, who rarely smiles, was grinning from cheek to cheek.

"I told the guys when we came in after the game that the best is still to come," said Noll. "This club hasn't peaked yet. We still have a lot ahead of us."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry, whose team staged a furious comeback after falling behind 35-17 within the last five minutes, was visibly disappointed.

"Our team played their hearts out and I was disappointed for them that they lost," Landry said. "The touchdown pass to Bleier just before the half seemed to turn the momentum around but we were coming back until the Smith play and had to settle for the field goal. That hurt and so did the interference call."

"The one thing I made up my mind was that I was gonna play my game win or lose," added Bradshaw.

It was the first four-touchdown game of Bradshaw's career and the 318 yards were a career high as he walked off with MVP honors in the first Super Bowl rematch. Bradshaw completed 17-of-30 passes in compiling his first 300-yard plus game.

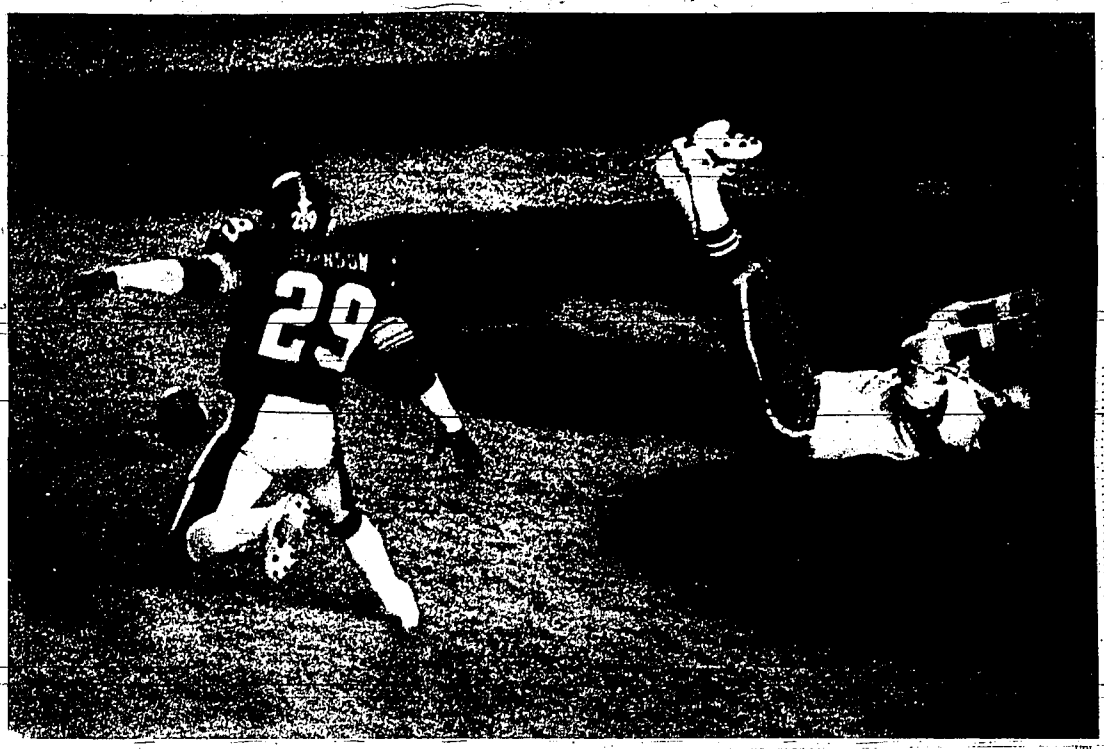

After a record scoring performance in the first half, the game turned into a defensive struggle. Dallas narrowed Pittsburgh's lead to 21-17 on Rafael Septien's 27-yard field goal in the third period. But Pittsburgh, with Bradshaw at the controls, put it away with a 14-point burst midway through the final period.

Septien's kick came after Jackie Smith, a 16-year veteran tight end playing in his first Super Bowl, dropped a sure touchdown pass which hit him in the chest in the end zone.

Taking over on his own 15 following a punt, Bradshaw took the Steelers down field, helped by a pass interference call. He hit Randy Grossman for 9 yards on a third-and-eight from the 17, hit Swann for 13 yards and then had another 33-yard gain when cornerback Benny Barnes was called for tripping Swann.

Franco Harris, Pittsburgh's bread-and-butter back who was held in check most of the game, finally broke loose as he churned 22 yards up the middle behind a devastating block by tackle Ray Pinney for the touchdown and a 28-17 lead.

Defensive tackle Randy White fumbled the kickoff and Dennis Winston recovered for Pittsburgh on the Cowboy 19. Bradshaw then fired his fourth touchdown pass on the first play from scrimmage for the second touchdown in 11 seconds and a 35-17 lead.

Cowboys' Jackie Smith lies on the ground wondering how he ever dropped sure touchdown pass from Quarterback Roger Staubach

Cowboys no match for Bradshaw

By DAVID MOFFIT
UPI Sports Writer

MIAMI, Fla. (UPI) — Coach Tom Landry said Sunday he thought the Dallas Cowboys had prepared a good plan for their Super Bowl battle with the Pittsburgh Steelers "but you never know what is going to happen."

"We were a little loose on our pass defense and they really took advantage of it," Landry said after the Steelers beat the Cowboys 35-31 with Pittsburgh quarterback Terry Bradshaw throwing for 318 yards and four touchdowns. "We kept our cornerbacks back a bit and they really took advantage. We should have been more aggressive."

Cowboys' safety Cliff Harris said he didn't feel that the way Dallas was playing defense had as much to do with Pittsburgh' success as the fact that Bradshaw had such an outstanding day.

"Lynn Swann and John Stallworth (the Steelers' wide receivers) make great catches but today it was really where Bradshaw put the ball," said Harris. "He seems to be throwing better than ever this year and I went over after the game and told him he really had a good day."

The unhappiest Cowboys of them all was linebacker Thomas Henderson, who had spent the entire Super Bowl week telling anyone who would listen how the Cowboys were going to beat up on the Steelers.

"As you can see I am a little sad," said Henderson as he sat on the bench in the Cowboys' dressing room with tears rolling down his cheeks. "I didn't feel defeat until the game was over but now I'm upset. I was working real hard out there and I'm hurt that we lost and hurt that we didn't make the big play to win the game."

Henderson and fellow linebacker Mike Hegman turned in one of the game's big plays early in the second quarter when they took the football away from Bradshaw and Hegman ran 37 yards for a touchdown that gave the Cowboys their only lead of the game, 14-7, with 12:08 left in the second quarter.

"It was a blitz and Bradshaw was rolling right when Thomas hit him," said Hegman. "At the moment I hit him he was switching the ball over and I took it out of his arms. I thought the play was going to be blown dead because he was going down. But fortunately they didn't so I just kept on running and listening for the whistle."

Landry said he had mentioned before the game that turnovers and breaks were going to make the difference.

"I turned out to be right," the Dallas coach said. "They're no better than we are on a given day."

The Cowboys had a chance to tie the score 21-21 late in the third quarter but had to settle for a field goal that left them trailing 21-17 after veteran tight end Jackie Smith dropped a Roger Staubach pass in the Pittsburgh end zone.

"The play was wide open and I tried to take a little bit off of it, just lob it in there," said Staubach. "It came in low and when he tried to cradle it in his pads. If I had thrown it in there he would have had an easy catch. He feels as bad as I do about it, but I could have thrown a better pass."

Referee positive about call

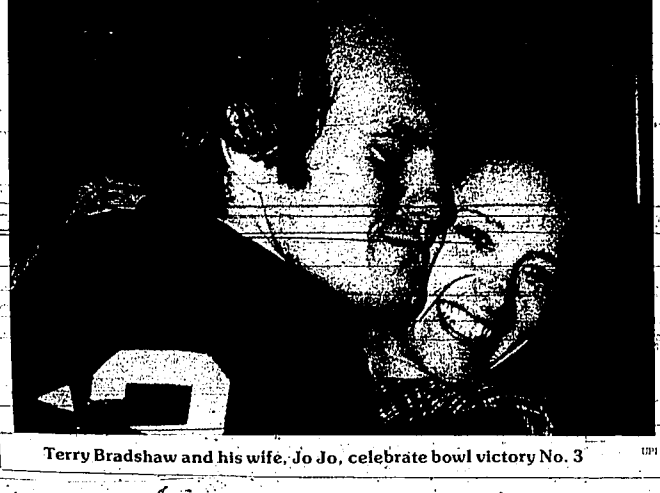

MIAMI (UPI) — Field Judge Fred Swearingen, who made the critical pass interference call in the fourth quarter that helped break open the Pittsburgh Steelers' 35-31 Super Bowl XIII victory over the Dallas Cowboys, said Sunday there was no doubt that receiver Lynn Swann was impeded from catching the ball.

The call came on a second-and-five from the Steeler 44. Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw threw down the left side to Swann, who bumped with Dallas cornerback Bennie Barnes and then went sprawling as the pass flew overhead.

Swearingen called interference on Barnes giving Pittsburgh a 33-yard gain to the Cowboys' 23 and three plays later Franco Harris had a 22-yard touchdown run that broke open the game.

"It was a judgement call on a pass play," said Swearingen. "The two players bumped before the ball was even close to them, perhaps before the ball was thrown. They were both looking back and the defender went to the ground. The Pittsburgh receiver (Swann), in trying to get the ball, was tripped by the defender's feet. He interfered with the receiver trying to get to the ball. It was coming to him in that direction and I threw the flag for pass interference."

Swearingen is the same official who called the controversial deflection pass play that resulted in Harris' touchdown run that beat Oakland in the AFC playoff several years ago.

Terry Bradshaw

Playing it 'his way'

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

MIAMI, Fla. (UPI) — They could call him dumb, they could call him stubborn, they could call him whatever they fancied, Terry Bradshaw, the unanimous MVP in Super Bowl XIII, was absolutely determined "to do it my way" no matter what.

By doing it his way, the Pittsburgh quarterback nearly had one of his shoulders torn off by Dallas linebacker Mike Hegman, but he also had the greatest day of his career Sunday with four touchdown passes that led the Steelers to a 35-31 Super Bowl victory over the Cowboys.

Bradshaw, whose best previous one-game passing effort was 291 yards against the New England Patriots on Sept. 26, 1976, hit on 17-of-30 passes for 317 yards against the Cowboys.

"The one thing I made up my mind was that I was gonna play my game win or lose," said the Steelers' quarterback, who has taken repeated criticism during his career for being slow upstairs and not overly bright.

"I didn't give a hoot what they would say, the thing I didn't want to do in this game was change what got me here. And what got me here was play-action passes and throwing the ball."

Bradshaw admitted he was shaken up somewhat when Hegman caught him on the shoulder in the second quarter. There seemed to be some question as to whether he could come back out and backup quarterback Mike Kruczek would have replaced him had he not been able to.

"I told him I was going back in," Bradshaw said.

Bradshaw put the Steelers ahead with a 28-yard scoring strike to John Stallworth in the first quarter and then after the Cowboys tied the score on Roger Staubach's 39-yard pitch to Tony Hill, Dallas went in front in the second quarter when Hollywood Henderson and Hegman both hit Bradshaw, causing him to fumble the ball as he was being sacked.

Henderson stripped the ball from Bradshaw's grasp and Hegman picked it up and ran 37 yards with it for a Cowboy touchdown.

Bradshaw had no apologies to make for the turnover.

"It was a blitz play," he said. "When I came out I ran into Franco (Harris) and I just fumbled the ball."

The Pittsburgh quarterback became upset with some of his teammates late in the final quarter when the Steelers were what they considered safely in front 35-17.

"There was 6:48 to play and our guys were celebrating," Bradshaw said. "It made me mad. I got upset when I thought to myself that we had scored 35 points and I have seen Dallas come from behind and I didn't want that to happen again."

Simmons, Correa excel at dome

POCATELLO — Greg Simons and Jairo Correa of the College of Southern Idaho indoor track team turned in outstanding performances Saturday night at an invitational meet in the Mini-Dome.

Simons, with a flat 6.0 seconds, won the 60-yard dash. This is one of the fastest times in the United States this year.

Correa broke CSI's school record by running a 8:58.3 two-mile.

The mile relay had a time of 3:28.

CSI's next competition will be Feb. 3 at Pocatello.

Tennis

Connors wins

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors, winning the big points when it counted most, defeated Eddie Dibbs 6-3, 3-6, 7-5 Sunday to win his fifth Grand Prix World Championship Tennis title.

Connors won $30,000 for the victory and Dibbs, ranked fifth in the world, took home $15,000.

Stan Smith and Dick Stockton shared the first-place doubles check of $9,100 with a 6-2, 6-3 finals victory over Elle Nastase and Tom Okker. Nastase and Okker split $5,500.

John Egerman beats Scott for men's racquetball title

TWIN FALLS — John Egerman of Boise captured the men's open singles title during the Idaho Volt Racquetball Tournament at Canyon Walls Racquet Club Sunday.

Egerman, 16, the national junior champion last year, defeated another Boise competitor, Joe Scott. Dave Green of Pocatello took third.

Tournament Director Gene Huggins reported that more than 100 persons participated in the largest tourney ever held in Twin Falls.

"It was quite an event," he commented. "We were real happy with the turnout."

Play started at 3 p.m. Friday and wound up at 7 p.m. Sunday. In between were sandwiched more than 200 matches and an exhibition between Egerman and Luzell Wilde, a nationally-ranked masters player.

Several Twin Falls players also captured individual and doubles trophies.

The following were the winners in their respective divisions:

• Men's open doubles — Joe Scott and Dave Carley of Boise, first; and Cooper and Reines of Boise, second.

• Men's seniors — Al MacMillan of Boise, first; Luzell Wilde of Salt Lake City, second; and David Skidmore of Boise, third.

• Men's B singles — Russ Baker of Boise, first; and Al Clausen of Ketchum, second.

• Men's C singles — Jeff Ballantine of Boise, first; and Jerry Poulsen of Twin Falls, second.

• Men's C doubles — Paul LaCroix-Mike Wolf of Twin Falls, first; and Jerry Poulsen-Gordon Beckstead, second.

• Men's novice — Peter Link of Twin Falls, first; Bob Latham of Twin Falls, second; and Ed Poppleton of Twin Falls, third.

• Women's B singles — Barbara Smith of Boise, first; Filler of Boise, second; and Bonnie Kay of Twin Falls, third.

• Women's C singles — Silva of Boise, first; Johnson of Boise, second; and Sue Maddan of Idaho Falls, third.

• Women's doubles — Pressman-Seff of Ketchum, first; Baker-Filler of Boise, second; and Kathy Anderson-Bonnie Kay of Twin Falls, third.

Phoenix Open

Crenshaw takes big lead

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Ben Crenshaw made a putting adjustment on his sixth green Sunday, then ran off nine birdies in the next 11 holes for a course record-tying 61 and a commanding lead in the second round of the rain-delayed Phoenix Open.

Closest to Crenshaw were first-round leader Jay Haas, Andy Bean and Jerry Pate. Bean and Pate had 66s and Haas 67 to stand at 10-under 132, four shots off the lead.

Howard Twitty also shot 66 and was all alone at 134 while Bill Rogers, Bruce Lietzke, George Burns, Jim Nelford and Ron Hinkle were at 135.

When Johnny Miller won the 1975 Phoenix Open with a 24-under-par 260, he had identical rounds of 67-61 the first two days, but 1979 is a different season and Miller, with a 70 Sunday, failed to make the cut.

Also missing the cut was defending champion Miller Barber who had a 69 and was at 143.

The 27-year-old Texan, frustrated last year when he failed to win a single tournament despite playing excellent golf, finished off his amazing round Sunday with a 10-foot birdie putt and after 36 holes in the shortened 54-hole official event he had a score of 14-under-par 128.

First round leader Jay Haas shot a 67 and Andy Bean had his second straight 66 to tie for second at 132, but they were four shots behind Crenshaw.

Ivy rivalry to end

PRINCETON, N.J. (UPI) — Princeton and Rutgers have agreed to end a football rivalry which began 110 years ago when the two universities met in what is considered the very first American football contest.

The two schools agreed Saturday to end the traditional game following a decision by the Princeton board of trustees which was prompted by Rutgers' move over the past couple of seasons into big league college football.

Cauthen heading home

ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI) — Steve Cauthen, the teen-age riding sensation who is currently in a horrendous slump at Santa Anita, will cut short his unsuccessful campaign at the Arcadia track and return to New York Monday to ride regularly, his agent announced Sunday.

Cauthen, 18, whose mounts earned a record $6 million plus in 1977 (a record that was broken by Darrel McHargue in 1978), was booed vigorously when he finished second aboard Affirmed behind Radar Ahead in the $114,200 San Fernando Stakes before 39,878 fans.

Irwin vaults to second

VERBIER, Switzerland (UPI) — Dave Irwin of Canada won two European Cup downhill races in three hours Sunday to vault into second place in the overall standings.

Irwin, unable to get into Canada's World Cup team because of the good form of Ken Read, Steve Podborski and Dave Murray, won both of the weather-postponed races.

Irwin, from Thunder Bay, Ont., clocked 1:52.74 to beat Bruno Fretz of Switzerland by almost 1½ seconds in the first race and again beat Fretz in the second, but this time just by 68-100th of a second.

Irwin moved into second place with 50 points in the cup standings behind Jarle Halsnes of Norway, who won a giant slalom across the border at Megeve in France.

Stiles named assistant

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Colorado University athletic director Eddie Crowder said Sunday Lynn Stiles, head coach at the University of San Jose for the past three seasons, will join the Buffs' coaching squad.

Stiles, a 1962 University of Utah graduate, finished the 1978 season at San Jose with a 17-17 record. Prior to the California assignment, Stiles was assistant head coach at UCLA from 1971-1975.

He also worked at the University of Iowa and his alma mater. Crowder said the hiring brings to eight the number of coaches added to the CU staff over the weekend.

Norwegian triumphs

DEVENTER, The Netherlands (UPI) — Norways's Jan Egir Storholt wrapped up the European Speed Skating championship Sunday when he won the 1,500 meters race, his third consecutive victory of the weekend, and coasted to a safe finish in the 10,000 meters.

Storholt had only to finish the 10,000 meters to be sure of the title after winning the 500 and 5,000 meters Saturday.

Swede suffers appendicitis

MONTE CARLO (UPI) — Sweden's Markku Alen, at the wheel of a Fiat, was suffering from appendicitis when he arrived at Vals-les-Bains in Southeastern France Sunday at the end of the opening 2000 kilometer stage of the Monte Carlo Rally.

After he was apprised of his condition, Alen said he hadn't decided whether to withdraw from the event, which ends in the principality Jan. 26.

Alen, one of the favorites, had felt weak in his drive from Rome where the competitors started Saturday after being blessed by Pope John Paul II in St. Peter's Square.

He was fourth across the Padua checkpoint where all the competitors were an hour late because of the icy roads.

By Sunday evening there were still 226 cars of the 233 starters who began from nine countries still in the race. They were arriving at Vals-les-Bains before leaving early Monday morning for the drive to Monte Carlo, where they are scheduled to arrive later in the day. Then begins the really severe tests from the Principality.

Italians Flaviano Polatto and Franco Bacco, one of the favored teams in an Autobianchi, already have withdrawn.

All the favorites from the London and Paris starting points passed through the control at Chateauroux in France without any problems. They were led by last year's winner, Jean-Pierre Nicolas and Jean Todt of France, in a Porsche Carrera.

Honeymoon over for Illini

By United Press International

The honeymoon is definitely over.

And Illinois Coach Lou Henson kind of knew it was going to happen.

"If we don't get some better defense, we are going to be in trouble," Henson predicted Saturday before the Illini, whose fairytale rise to the No. 2 spot in the national rankings this season had stunned college basketball fans everywhere, fell to unranked Purdue, 69-57.

"We need to keep the ball out of (center Joe Barry) Carroll's possessive hands," said Henson, who was looking for his 300th college career victory.

But Illinois, which had the longest winning streak in the country — 15 — until a week ago, just couldn't do the job.

Carroll, a seven-foot-one junior, overpowered the Illini, scoring 24 points and pulling down 10 rebounds as he became the 17th Boilermaker to top the 1,000 point career scoring mark and led the stunning upset that raised Purdue's Big Ten record to 3-3 and 13-5 overall.

Arnette Hallman had 17 points and Jerry Sichting added 14 for Purdue. Eddie Johnson led the Illini with 15 points, followed by Rob Judson with 12 points and Levi Cobb with 10.

All the other top-ten teams did pretty much what was expected of them Saturday — win — although some conference rivals mounted severe challenges.

In easy wins, top-rated Notre Dame downed South Carolina 82-73, fourth-ranked UCLA routed Arizona State 95-79, No. 5 Indiana State downed Creighton 90-80, and No. 10 Marquette beat Xavier 67-50.

But third-ranked North Carolina barely edged Maryland, 54-53, in the tough Atlantic Coast Conference, No. 6 Michigan State needed an overtime to top Iowa, 83-72, in Big Ten action, No. 7 Louisville shaved Florida State, 67-65, in the Metro Conference and No. 8 Louisiana State nudged Mississippi, 70-69, in an overtime Southeastern Conference match.

Duke edges Wolfpack

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Center Mike Gminski scored 31 points and 9th-ranked Duke used the free-throw line down the stretch to defeat 18th ranked North Carolina State 75-69 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game Sunday.

Duke, now 12-3 overall and 3-1 in the conference, scored its last 13 points from the free-throw line to hold off a late rally by the Wolfpack, which fell to 11-6 overall and 0-5 in the league. The Wolfpack has now lost four straight.

North Carolina State led 35-32 at the half, but the lead changed hands seven times in the second period before Duke took the lead for good on a Gminski basket with 11:29 to go to make it 54-53.

The Blue Devils went up 64-57 during the next five minutes before two baskets by Clyde Austin, who led the Wolfpack scoring with 17 points, brought the team to within three with about five minutes to play.

Gminski, who was only two points shy of his career scoring record, then hit three straight free throws to make it 67-61 and close the door on a North Carolina State comeback.

Laffite captures Argentine prix

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — France's Jacques Laffite Sunday won the Argentine Formula One Grand Prix, dominated by the Ligier JS 11 team from start to finish, and marred by an eight-car collision.

John Watson's McLaren M28 sideswiped Jody Scheckter's Ferrari T3 at the first curve of the 3.7 mile circuit, starting a chain reaction that involved last year's world champion Mario Andretti, Didier Pironi, Patrick Tambay, Nelson Piquet, Niki Lauda and Arturo Merzario.

Watson, who went on to finish third, Andretti, and Lauda were able to continue when the race was started again after an hour-and-fifteen minute delay.

Patrick Depailler, starting beside Laffite, took the early lead, but Laffite recovered the first position in the 11th lap. He put a long distance between himself and his nearest competitors, while Depailler hung onto second place until his Ligier developed engine problems and had to go into the pit briefly on the 45th lap.

Argentina's Carlos Reutemann delighted the 70,000-capacity crowd at the Autodrome by finishing second.

Laffite said after his brilliant start of the 1979 racing season, "I hope we will be the best this year but it will be very competitive."

Ligier team manager Gerard Ducaroge said he feels "fantastic" and "it's a pity Depailler had to come into the boxes or he would have been up there on the podium too."

Depailler limped in fourth, because his engine began misfiring and had to be cooled down.

Andretti, with only 52 of the 53 laps completed, was in fifth place. "A securing screw on the front airfoil came loose and I lost a pod on the side of the car," said the driver from Nazareth, Pa., who won the Argentine Prix last year. "The car lost its aerodynamic effect."

There was a good stiff breeze blowing, under clear skies and southern hemisphere summer sunshine.

W. German edges Stenmark

KITZBUEHEL, Austria (UPI) — Christian Neureuther of West Germany, a 29-year-old veteran who has twice returned from self-imposed retirement, climaxed a long career Sunday when he edged three-time World Cup champion Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden for victory in a World Cup slalom race.

Neureuther outduelled the Swedish ace when he streaked down the Kitzbuehel track in a combined time of 1 minute 41.16 seconds, only 0.26 seconds ahead of Stenmark, who posted 1:41.42.

American Phil Mahre finished third in 1:41.53, racking up the best result for the U.S. ski team this winter.

"It's the most important victory in my long career because I defeated Stenmark in a regular race — that's what I have been waiting for all the time," said Neureuther.

Neureuther's win, his second this season, meant a clean sweep of victories for the unheralded West Germans after teammate Sepp Ferstl won the World Cup downhill Saturday over the favored Austrians and Canadians.

"The first win did not give me the same satisfaction because Stenmark fell in the first heat," said Neureuther, who won at Crans Montana earlier this month.

"But this time I defeated him for the first time in a regular race after he even clocked the best time in the second run. It's the climax of my career."

Stenmark, still dominant in giant slalom, has scored only one win in five World Cup slaloms this season and was uncharacteristically angry at falling for the fourth time.

"I had a terrible first run," said Stenmark, who threw his ski cap to the ground when he turned to the scoreboard after crossing the line. "(I have) no chance to win after such a poor performance."

Neureuther, who won his first World Cup slalom in 1973 at a time when Stenmark was still a teen-ager, has enjoyed a checkered career but now has his eyes firmly fixed on the 1980 Olympic Games in Lake Placid.

Stenmark's second place still leaves him at the head of the World Cup rankings with 185 points. But his lead has been cut to only eight points after Switzerland's Peter Luescher gained additional Cup points by placing third in the Alpine combined.

Andreas Wenzel of Liechtenstein is third with 102 points and Phil Mahre, the best U.S. skier, shares fourth place with Italy's Piero Gros at 66 points.

ACME INTRODUCES SPEED TWIN POTATO PLANTER

Now...Faster Field Speeds With All The Options Of The Complete Acme System

A completely new innovation, THE SINGLE-CHAIN, DOUBLE-CUP system, now makes possible faster field speeds with the famous FOOLPROOF DEPENDABILITY AND PRECISION PLACEMENT of the Acme complete potato planting system.

The chain actually operates at half the former speed for any given rate through the field. You get precision seedpiece placement and locked-in positioning in the row, even when covering many more acres per day.

A new FREE FLOW trash shoe provides easier pulling and holds the seedpiece in a narrower trench with less soil compaction. The seed hopper has been redesigned which, along with the paddle agitator and double-cup system, eliminates bridging — increases dependability. There are many other new features too! — all available on two, four and six-row models, semi-mounted and tongue-drawn.

ACME DEALER SERVICE IS ONE OF YOUR MOST IMPORTANT ADVANTAGES

Most of our dealers have served their agricultural communities for 15 years with Acme planters, draper chain and farm tools. We expect them to be there 15 years hence, which is your guarantee that parts and service will be available when you need them.

Many Acme planters more than ten years old are still in operation. Acme dealers provide parts and service to guarantee your investment will pay off year after year.

Drop in at your nearby Acme dealer and choose the options best suited to your potato operation and plant this year's crop with a new Acme Speed Twin.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Oswald: "Let's run some articles on play for a while. How about some examples of playing for a specific number of tricks in a suit."

Alan: "Here's one. South has eight tricks in aces and kings. West's heart opening looks like a short suit lead so South can only expect two heart tricks. The place for his ninth trick must be in spades and it is up to South to find the safest way to collect three spade tricks."

Oswald: "He wins the first heart in dummy and leads a spade toward his jack. If East holds the queen the third spade trick is there right away, but West wins with the queen over the jack. West leads a second heart. South wins."

Alan: "Now comes the sure-thing play. South leads his four of spades and finesses the nine. If cast produces the ten, South will just score three spade tricks — but that is the number he needs. This play has guarded against the actual spade holding."

Oswald: "South can try to work out some sort of squeeze for an extra trick, but his contract is now sure."

This is the South hand shown in today's article. A Vermont reader asked us if we open it one club or one notrump.

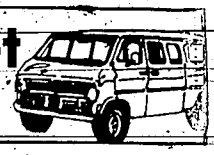

In standard American a 15-point hand is just below the one-notrump range. So the standard opening is one club. If you play a 15-17 notrump you should still open one club as we did in today's article.
